THEATRES CAROLINA

Held over through this Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday matinee at 3:00, at the Carolina Theatre, is the C. V. Whitney masterpiece in VistaVision and Technicolor, "The Searchers," starring John Wayne, Vera Miles with Jeffrey Hunter, Ward Bond and Natalie Wood.

Adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story, it is both great and strong with the firmness of stance and directness of point that makes great pictures great.

The photography is tremendously effective in capturing, in the splendid dimensions of VistaVision, the magnificent Monument Valley terrain that figured so momentarily in the Ford Production of "Stagecoach" in the same region.

Coming to the Carolina, Sunday through Thursday (5 days) July 8-12, with three shows Sunday day at 3, 5, and 7, on week nights at 8:15, and a Wednesday matinee at 3, is MGM's greatest production since "Quo Vadis!" Pandro Berman's "Bhowani Junction," based on the best-seller by John Masters and lensed in CinemaScope and Color, in its native locale in India. It is exciting, thrilling, topical film fare at its best.

Starring Ava Gardner and Stewart Granger, with Bill Travers, Abraham Sofaer, Francis Matthews and many others, it opens on a vast canvas of colorful scenics and busy physical action, with appropriate native music, and this sets the mood for the immense panoramic picture the story paints of modern India's sociological and political changes.

Besides the regular cast such huge crowds appear on the screen (with the cooperation of the Pakistan Government, which provided officers and men of the 13th Battalion Frontier Force Rifles, units of the Punjab police and facilities of the Northwestern Railway), that the spectator will get the impression that the cameras are literally encompassing all of India's teeming millions.

With all its giant proportions, the intimate love story of the beautiful half-caste girl with her emotional conflicts, is so well and tenderly told, that it wins audience sympathy.

Ava Gardner is magnificent as that girl. Her beauty and other physical attributes, added to her splendid handling of the part, leave a memorable impression.

With quiet dignity that is most effective, Stewart Granger handles the role of the British colonel in love with her.

British actor Bill Travers makes his first appearance in an American made film in the role of a half-caste with the same social problems as Miss Gardner.

A vivid love story on a background of turmoil and revolt... filmed by MGM in modern Pakistan.

will have its local premiere Sunday at the Sunrise theatre.

A distinguished cast, headed by Gregory Peck, Jennifer Jones, winner of the nation-wide Audience Award, the National Critics Poll and, more recently, the Photoplay Gold Medal as the most popular actress of 1955, and Fredric March, twice an Oscar winner, bring this popular novel to life on the CinemaScope screen in color by De Luxe.

Other members of the cast, which numbers 38 players, include Marisa Pavan, Lee J. Cobb, Ann Harding, Keenan Wynn and Gene Lockhart.

The man in the gray flannel suit, who changed to civvies from the olive drab uniform of World War 2, is a fairly universal figure in America today and it is the wide appeal of a story of such a man that prompted Mr. Zanuck to pay a fabulous price for the book when it was first published.

It has been on the best-seller list ever since and has received both critical and popular acclaim. In translating the story to the screen Mr. Zanuck used every resource of the Twentieth Century-Fox production organization to capture the emotional impact of Tom Rath's struggle with his conscience, his exploits in the war, and his efforts to rise in the business world.

Gregory Peck plays the role of Tom and Jennifer Jones is his wife Betsy in the story. They married when he was twenty-one and shortly after he went to war. As a paratrooper he killed seventeen men. He had an affair with an Italian girl in Rome which later disturbed his life with Betsy and made them question whether their life has been really what they wanted.

Around 1,194,497 girls and 961,455 boys belong to 4-H Clubs across the nation, according to latest tabulations in Washington.

Milletts have been found superior to Sudan grass for summer grazing on the sandy soils of the North Carolina Coastal Plain.
