

Vass Man Gets Road Term On Charges Of Drunk Driving, Damaging Autos

It took almost eight days for Lloyd Stewart, resident of Vass, to get his comeuppance for flagrant violations of the motor vehicle laws, but get it he did in Moore Recorder's Court Monday.

Stewart, charged with driving drunk, careless and reckless driving, hit and run, driving without a valid operator's license, and damaging other automobiles in a wild driving spree Friday, July 13, pleaded guilty on all charges.

Stewart was not the easiest person in the world to get along with that night, it was reported.

An ambulance driver, summoned to the scene along Highway No. 1 by neighbors who had witnessed Stewart's wild driving escapes, was fought off by Stewart.

When two members of the State Highway Patrol, E. G. Shoemaker and H. A. Hight, Jr., arrived, they took him to St. Joseph of the Pines Hospital in Southern Pines. Stewart caused so much commotion at the hospital that two members of the Southern Pines police force were summoned.

Testimony at the trial Monday indicated he had done considerable damage to two cars, owned by Gwen C. Johnson of Sanford and Owen J. Musselwhite of Wilson. It was reported he hit another but the damage was only slight.

Judge Rowe ordered Stewart to six months on the roads, but suspended the sentence on condition he pay the costs and a fine of $275, part of which was to be used to pay damages to the two cars.

Stewart also lost his driver's license.

Judge Rowe ordered 33 cash bonds forfeited during the day.

Other cases:
Lura Owens, Route 1, Asheville, assault and battery, threats, not guilty.

Frank Bailey, Route 3, Lillington, driving drunk, driving without operator's license, failure to stop, unlawful possession of whiskey, 60 days on roads, suspended on payment of fine of $100 and costs, license revoked 12 months.
