Maneuvers Set At Bragg, Mackall By 82nd Airborne

Preparations are underway for Exercise Pinecone, a local field exercise to take place at Fort Bragg and Camp Mackall, August 18-23. More than 10,000 men will participate in the exercise, approximately 6,000 coming from the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg.

Two hundred and sixteen Army and Air Force aircraft will be employed in the exercise. Air Force and Air Force Reserve units from stations throughout the eastern and mid-western sectors of the nation will form the combat airlift to transport troops from takeoff sites to Fort Bragg's drop zones during actual exercise play.

Prior to the start of Pinecone, personnel will move by plane and truck to numerous airfields within two hundred miles of Fort Bragg. On the 22nd of August they will be flown back to Fort Bragg, jumping in on all the drop zones and at Camp Mackall during the actual tactical phase of the exercise.

Farm production is expected to drop from the record level of 1955 on the basis of conditions at mid-year, according to the Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA.

THEATRES CAROLINA

Continuing through this Thursday-Saturday at the Carolina Theatre is the special documentary production "The Animal World" in Technicolor, with the addition of another special subject, "Down Liberty Road," in Technicolor

Coming Sunday through Thursday (five days) August 5-9, with three Sunday shows at 3, 7 and 9 is that exciting picture that has just set New York agog, "Somebody Up There Likes Me," an immense entertainment!

Boasting a great new star, Paul Newman, the film biography of boxer Rocky Graziano is a warm, honest and compelling motion picture, graced with a fresh and appealing script and exciting performance right down the line, the film is entertainment at its best.

This turbulent, exciting, yet inspiring and heart-warming drama of Rocky Graziano's career from his boyhood as an East Side hoodlum to middleweight champion of the world, is terrific entertainment.

Paul Newman scores an acting triumph as the rebellious Rocky, and there are fine characterizations by Pier Angeli, Everett Sloane, Eileen Hackert, and other members of the exceptional cast.

While boxing occupies a key position in any account of Graziano's life, this is by no means a prize-fight picture, but rather the story of a man's redemption through a touching love story. The drama is there to back up the adjectives.

Newman's remarkable portrayal of the nervous, inarticulate delinquent will give his screen career a tremendous boost. Miss Angeli is most appealing as his wife and Eileen Heckart's pathetic mother rates an Academy Award nomination.

SUNRISE

Never was the march of events more desperate, the need for understanding love more precious to a pair of young lovers than in those bittersweet days prior to "D-Day," the sixth of June.

Just such a universal love story is written in heart's blood in Twentieth Century-Fox's poignant drama which will open Sunday at the Sunrise Theatre. The movie stars Robert Taylor, Richard Todd, Dana Wynter and Edmond O'Brien.

Taylor and the lovely English actress, Dana Wynter, symbolize the romantics of this war in the same expression as Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms" spoke about love and war to an earlier generation. The film dramatizes Lionel Shapiro's best-selling novel of the tender romance between a beautiful English girl, who waves her British lover off to World War 2, and a dashing American officer who already has a wife in the United States. When the Britisher returns, she is torn between a love and duty that is only resolved on a flaming beach in Normandy during the first hours of the sixth of June, 1944.

English compatriot of Miss Wynter, Richard Todd, who scored so memorably in "A Man Called Peter," portrays the shy but worshipful suitor who shines as a leader among men on the battlefield. The other starring assignment in the skillful hands of Edmond O'Brien reveals with glaring honesty the behavior of a rank-happy American officer whose whims reflect with heavy consequence upon Taylor and in turn, his romance with the lovely Dana.

Industrial Relations Program Has Ten Cardinal Points, Speaker Says

The functions and purposes of an Industrial Relations department in a large corporation were outlined to members of the Sandhills Kiwanis Club on Wednesday by Frank R. Gramelsbach, of Pinehurst, director of that division of the Amerotron Corporation. Its efforts can spell the difference between the success or failure of a concern, he said.

It must function with two cardinal points in mind: full acceptance and the dignity of individuals, and the concept of the Golden Rule.

It is a ten-point program, and Mr. Gramelsbach outlined these points as:

1. Public relations — the public must be kept informed about the organization.
2. Labor relations, the maintenance of harmony between management and its employees.
3. Employment, the intelligent recruiting for personnel and the fitting of the employe into the job he can best perform.
4. Wages and salaries, the fair setting of rates for various groups.
5. Training program. Job training eliminates much discontent, and helps the employe increase his earnings.
6. Safety, the removal of job hazards.
7. Health and medical, involving company-financed programs for care, hospitalization and insurance.
8. Industrial production standards must be maintained.
9. Research, seeking to eliminate problems between management and labor, and labor turnover.
10. Communications, the dissemination of information throughout a plant that each department may know what the other is doing, to avoid misunderstandings.

"The Industrial Relations direction is primarily concerned with maintenance of an efficient working organization, that industrial operations may be made profitable," Mr. Gramelsbach said. "Such a department is becoming a powerful force in industry, and can develop a climate of better relationships all along the line."
