Old Bethesda Plans Homecoming

Old Bethesda Church will hold its annual Home Coming Sunday.

On this day, September 30, the congregation, which normally worships in the Aberdeen church, will move out to the old building "at the head of the Rockfish," as the old histories put it, to meet in the annual hospitality and worship celebration for which the old church, first organized in 1790, has long been the gathering place.

The morning service will get under way at 11:15. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. J. McDowell Richards, president of Columbia Theological Seminary at Decatur, Georgia. There will be special music by the glee club of Flora Macdonald College.

At the noon hour there will be the usual social hour as families gather under the trees with their picnic lunches.

In the afternoon, at two o'clock, Dr. Frontis Johnston, of the department of history of Davidson College, will deliver an address on some phase of the history of the Presbyterian Church.

Chairman of the occasion is E. T. McKeithen, Elder in Bethesda Church. The Rev. Jack W. Ewart is pastor.

The old church on the back road between Aberdeen and Southern Pines, is used only rarely during the year. The present building is said to be the third on the same site.

James Boyd, author of Drums, Marching On and other novels, in the introduction which he wrote for the book, "Old Bethesda," by Bion Butler, wrote thus of an early impression of the church.

"There stood the church, a great square box on sparse rock piers. It was not much more than the simplest possible way of providing a place of worship for a great number of people. But there is a good deal to be said for the simplest way of doing anything. It still seems to me a sounder building than most of the more elegant churches that now dot our more progressive countryside. I turn from their billious glass and imitation stone to Bethesda's tall, thin windows and restful sides, silvered with weather and almost forgotten paint. Its large simplicity among the oaks gave it a certain meagre and unassuming dignity."

Vass Firemen Are Hosts At Quarterly District Meeting

The Vass Volunteer Fire Department was host to the Sandhill Firemen's Association at its quarterly dinner meeting, held Friday night in the Vass Community House, with the Mayor and Town Commissioners as special guests. Dinner was served by the Vass Woman's Club.

James Hudson, assistant chief of the host department, presided and Mayor A. G. Edwards, Jr., extended a welcome to the visiting firemen, to which Perry C. Covington of Rockingham, head of the association and Rockingham chief, responded. The Rev. Thomas Wolfe of the Vass Baptist Church gave the invocation.

Chief Covington presided over the business session and E. P. Leatherbury of Hamlet, secretary-treasurer, gave his reports. Chief Harold Fowler of Southern Pines reported on the State convention held recently in Raleigh.

Parker L. Vickery, chief of the Fort Bragg Fire Department, was the principal speaker and John F. Stitch, chief inspector at Fort Bragg, gave a fire prevention demonstration.

Represented in the attendance of 80 were the departments at Pembroke, Hamlet, Rockingham, Pinebluff, Southern Pines, Star, Candor, Vass, Ellerbe, Pinehurst and West End.

STEVENSON

(Continued from Page 1) on the draft were long and intricate. It seemed clear that he was anxious that the press should have a perfectly clear knowledge of what he had and what he had not said. Of course, he had not called for a speedy termination of the draft. He had said that because of the rapid changes taking place in armaments "we can now anticipate... hopefully but responsibly..."

that within the foreseeable future we can maintain the armed forces we need without the draft."

He went into a great deal of detail why this was so. The press got a bit restive during this stretch, doubtless knowing it all beforehand.

The thing seemed a bit out of balance to us. Whatever was said now, his opponents would keep right on saying the other. If the remark had been a political stunt to win votes, it had been stupid, absolutely bound to boomerang. It hardly seemed as if Stevenson could be that naive. On the other hand, there was his silly byplay mispronouncing the word "elite". Ridiculous of him and his advisers to imagine that his intelligent hearers would believe he didn't know how to pronounce the word, while his unintelligent ones wouldn't know he had mispronounced it. It made him look both silly and, for the first time, tricky. Let's hope it backfired so hard that it taught him not to let himself be talked into such monkey-shines again.

Later we asked one of the campaign people what, if any, were the plans as regards coming to North Carolina, and got a disappointing answer. It looks unlikely, apparently, at the present time. This contemplated trip by air is a rigorous one; no very definite plans for the next jaunt have been made, we take it, or will be till they see how this trip goes. But when Stevenson was asked the question: "Do you consider that you are sure of the vote of the Southern states?" he said: "Yes," and then went on, with a grin, "but I'm sure of the vote of a lot of other states, too, you know!"

And that may explain one reason why Adlai may not get down this way. It's a reason that, to our way of thinking, just shows the high intelligence of the land south of the Mason-Dixon line, and the good judgment of the candidate.

However, lest any should imagine Stevenson won't try to come, we must add that he showed great affection for his "North Carolina home."

He asked about the weather and the crops and the folks. There was a real yearning look in his eye as he asked about the prospects for deer hunting this year. We couldn't do more than say: "You'd better come and see," but we said his friends were looking for him and promised him the warmest welcome yet from Moore County.

ABERDEEN BAPTISTS

to more than 500. The ground level of the educational building provides space for two adult departments, consisting of ten classes. Five classrooms and an assembly room for the young people's department are also in the building.

A recreation room and dining area with a kitchen are located under the sanctuary. Space for utility equipment is also provided.

On the main floor of the educational building is the nursery wing with four nursery departments, reception room and kitchen. Adjoining are two beginner departments.

The other wing of the main level provides the church offices, church parlor and pastor's study.

On the top level of the educational building provision has been made for three departments: intermediates and juniors with assembly room and eight class room each, and primary grades with assembly and six class rooms.

All new furnishings for the educational building were provided through funds from the estate of Mrs. Agnes Yates.

Brief History The church was originally founded in 1894 when a Presbyterian met at Aberdeen and talked with a local group, which numbered 18. J. L. Holland and W. R. Hunter were elected deacons of the newly founded church and J. W. Fagan was named clerk-treasurer.

Three days later the church elected Mr. Holland, Mr. Fagan, Mr. Hunter, and C. A. Adams as trustees, and, in addition, named them to the first building committee.

There is nothing in the church records to indicate the exact date of completion of the present church, but a notation indicates that it was completed prior to May, 1895.

In 1945 Dr. Medlin broached the idea of setting up a permanent building fund. And from that, a committee made up of Dr. Medlin, O. Leon Seymour, Curtis Lawton, J. M. Taylor and W. W. Norris, was appointed to study and plan a broader church program.

The Rev. Deese became pastor in May, 1954, and the building program was immediately put in motion. Dr. Medlin has served continuously as building committee chairman and Jack M. Taylor as chairman of the finance committee.

Open House Open house at the church will be held Sunday from 2 until 4:30 p. m. The evening worship service is scheduled at 7:30 with the Rev. Caudle leading the service.

ALL-DAY

Three communities — Robbins, West End and Lakeview—are not formally participating in the drive because they contribute through the Community Chest.

Frank Yandell, district Scout executive, said today that more than 750 adults in the Council would work in the drive, in efforts to raise the needed funds. "The budget this year is about eight per cent more than it was last year," he pointed out, adding that the number of scouts taken into the various troops has increased a far greater percentage.

Governor Hodges has told Scout officials that he would appear on a TV hookup Monday morning at 10 o'clock with a group of outstanding scouts from all the state's councils to help get the canvass off to a good start.

Earl Hubbard To Be In Charge Of C. Of C. Banquet

Earl Hubbard, assistant cashier of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company, has been appointed general chairman of the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet, it was announced this morning by Mark J. King, president.

No date for the banquet has been set.

King also said the following have been appointed: Mrs. Lou Culbreth, tickets and seating; George Leonard, speaker and entertainment; Miss Katherine McDonald, hostess; Johnnie Hall, arrangements and program; and Mrs. Gladys Graves, publicity and decorations.

BIG EVENTS

merce, pushing this phase of the event, said today that all window displays must be ready by Tuesday for judging Wednesday. Prizes will be awarded the winners.

Each class at the high school will select a candidate for a beauty queen contest, which will be held between halves.

The band and glee club will also perform then and have been putting together a special show for the occasion.

The student selling the most tickets for the game will receive a record player, according to the Rotary Club, and a cash award will be presented the class selling the most.

Southern Pines defeated Clayton last year for the Eastern Championship in six-man football. This year they will be favored again, though several injuries to the squad may cut down the chances somewhat.

Rotary members have advised early purchase of tickets.
