

Lions Hear Inside Story On Kennedy-Kefauver Battle

Those "creepie peepies" that the national television networks used at the Democratic convention in August got a lot of places that had previously been overlooked, but they didn't get everywhere.

That fact was brought to light Friday night when members of the Southern Pines and Pinehurst Lions Clubs heard a firsthand report of the convention from Mayor Voit Gilmore of Southern Pines, who was an alternate delegate.

Gilmore, first tracing the history of National conventions since the first one was held in 1832, told the Lions that this convention was marked by a number of things, one of them the tremendous amount of money spent in behalf of Averell Harriman's candidacy.

"Banners, buttons and talkative supporters" were rampant at the convention, Gilmore said, "and a vast amount of it was plugging Harriman. I even had a phonograph record with a personal greeting from Harriman delivered to me. And the rest of the delegates and alternates received the same... an expensive campaign I assure you."

Gilmore commended the North Carolina delegation for avoiding a possible split on the nomination of a vice-presidential candidate. Senator Scott, he said had come out in opposition to Senator John Kennedy of Massachusetts, while the state's other Senator, Sam Ervin of Morganton, had expressed opposition to Estes Kefauver.

To avoid the split, which seemed inevitable under the constant prodding of the two Senators, the delegation was persuaded to cast a "favorite son" vote for Governor Hodges, knowing that later they could switch support to someone else.

Don Traylor, president of the Southern Pines Lions, presided at the joint meeting.
