

ESTIMATED AT MORE THAN $100,000

Construction Bids For New National Guard Armory Will Be Opened Nov. 13

Action on the long-delayed project for the Southern Pines National Guard unit seemed assured this week with the announcement from the Adjutant General's office that bids were now being taken for the new building, and scheduled November 13 as the date for opening bids.

Construction of the armory, with costs estimated at better than $100,000, was originally scheduled for the past summer, but was held up pending changes in standard armory plans. The new plans, which have been approved by the National Guard Bureau in Washington, provide for a larger building than the original plans, and include offices for the unit staff, locker rooms, supply rooms, a library and day room, classrooms, rifle range and kitchen, as well as a large central drill hall.

Preliminary grading of the site, next to the present motor storage building, was completed early this fall.

Representatives of the Adjutant General's office will be in Southern Pines Tuesday, November 13, to open bids on the building. The bid opening is scheduled for 2 p.m. in the present drill hall on Morganton Road.

Construction is now expected to be started about the first of the year.

Persons or firms interested in bidding on the project, or those desiring to see the plans and specifications, are asked to call the local unit, for details. A copy of the plans and specifications is available at the unit.

THEATRE CAROLINA

Continuing through this Thursday-Saturday at 8:15 with a Saturday matinee at 3 o'clock at the Carolina Theatre, are the last three days of the special production, "Moby Dick" in Technicolor, starring Gregory Peck, Richard Basehart, Leo Genn, Orson Welles and hosts of others.

A thoughtful and stimulating romantic drama, "The Power And The Prize" coming to the Carolina Sunday through Wednesday, marks the American screen debut of the lovely Swiss actress, Elisabeth Mueller, who is described as another Garbo or Ingrid Bergman, together with a talented array of supporting players including Robert Taylor, Burl Ives, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Mary Astor and Charles Coburn.

The story, somewhat reminiscent of that well-remembered "Executive Suite," of some time ago, is from a book by Howard Swiggett, is one of conflict between heart and humanity on the one hand and ruthlessness and greed for power on the other. Naturally heart and humanity, spurred on by romance, win out but not before the screenplay indulges in some sideswipes at American big business and British imperialism, in which patrons cannot but be impressed with the fresh, intense personality of Elisabeth Mueller, and the powerful and well rounded performance given by Burl Ives, sometime troubador and stage actor, now making his film debut and as a villain, no less.

The CinemaScope production is attractive, the romantic scenes in London are diverting.

Starting Thursday night, November 1, is "A Cry In The Night," with Edmund O'Brien and Natalie Wood, together with an added short subject in Color, "The Amazon Trader."

Assault Charges Against Three Law Officers Dismissed In Court Monday

The trial of three Moore County law enforcement officers, who had been charged by an Aberdeen woman with assault, was dismissed in Moore Recorder's Court Monday, but attorneys for the woman said they would try to get it back on next Monday's docket.

The officers, Robert Yates, former chief of police in Aberdeen, Burney Sanders, night policeman there, and A.B.C. officer Kieth Marks, had been arrested on charges brought by Mary McCrimmon. She had charged in the warrant that the officers had broken into her house and assaulted her. The officers were prepared to deny the charges.

The case began October 6 when the three arrested Mary McCrimmon, Willie Allsbrooks and Henry Jones. The first two were charged with gambling; Jones with interfering with an officer.

The cases were tried in Aberdeen Recorder's Court Friday and Judge P. H. Wilson found each guilty and fined them $10 each and costs. During the trial the defendants had charged the officers with brutality while being arrested.

Judge Rowe found the warrants presented in Moore Recorder's Court as defective and ordered the case dismissed.

Herbert F. Seawell, Jr., Carthage attorney, said, however, that new warrants would be drawn up and that the trial would likely be held next Monday.

SUNRISE THEATRE

The exploits of one of the South's crack National Guard units that fought heroically in the Pacific during World War 2 has been dramatized in "Between Heaven and Hell," a Twentieth Century-Fox CinemaScope picture in DeLuxe color, which opens at the Sunrise Theatre here on Sunday.

Robert Wagner, Terry Moore, Broderick Crawford and Buddy Ebsen head the star cast in this story of love, the horrors of war and the hard life of sharecroppers. It was written by Francis Gwaltney, a young Arkansas novelist, whose southern upbringing gave him the necessary background for "The Day the Century Ended," his second novel, upon which the picture was based. His character studies in "Between Heaven and Hell" are reminiscent of such military themes as "From Here To Eternity" and "The Caine Mutiny."

Producer David Weisbart took his company to Hawaii to film the exciting beach-landing scenes that show the Southern troops getting their first baptism of fire from the Japanese. The heroic action of young Sam Gifford a hot-headed youth, in wiping out a Jap squad holed-up in a cave wins him the Silver Star medals and motivates the unfolding of the gripping story. It was here that these Southern troops won for themselves the name of "Hell-Fighters of the Pacific."

Robert Wagner plays the highly serious role of a young, Southern landowner who has no use for sharecroppers, or people their like, until he learns to judge his fellow man by what he is and not by his station in life. Many people are responsible for bringing him to this realization. There is the cowardly Army Captain who needs protection from his own men, played by Broderick Crawford. There is also his lovely Southern-belle wife, played by Terry Moore, who shows him that an otherwise idyllic relationship is being threatened by his attitude toward people below his in class. And there are his fellow soldiers in the heated action of the Pacific Theatre of War.

"Between Heaven and Hell" features a strong supporting cast headed by Robert Keith, Brad Dexter, Mark Damon, Ken Clark, Harvey Lembeck, Skip Homeier, L. Q. Jones, Tod Andrews, Biff Elliot and Bart Burns.

Population increases in the eleven states of the Southern Region were used in the recent Timber Resource Review to estimate future timber needs. The Census Bureau says the total regional gain was more than 17 per cent—about 5.5 million people—from 1940 to 1955, with all states except Arkansas, Mississippi, and Oklahoma contributing to that increase. The annual per capita consumption of wood in 1952 was 65 board feet, says the TRR report.

Mrs. J. E. Causey Named Junior Red Cross Chapter Head

Mrs. J. E. Causey, Jr., of Lakeview, accepted an appointment this week as Chairman of the Junior Red Cross for Moore County Chapter, American Red Cross, according to an announcement made today by Mrs. Audrey K. Kennedy, Executive Secretary.

The work of the chairman is primarily the enrollment of school children in the Junior Red Cross, the promotion of relations between the Moore County children and those of other areas; the production of articles useful in various military hospitals, and general safety work attached to Red Cross activity.

Mrs. Kennedy pointed out that she was confident that Mrs. Causey would prove a great benefit in the growth of the Red Cross in the county. "The youth of the county will surely become the leaders of the future, and the Junior Red Cross training will be a great benefit," she said.
