MISS STINSON, STATE CTA PRESIDENT, SPEAKS TO TEACHERS OF MOORE COUNTY

Miss Nell E. Stinson, president of the North Carolina Classroom Teachers Association, was principal speaker when the Moore County Classroom Teachers Association, a division of the North Carolina Education Association, met Thursday afternoon in the Carthage High School auditorium with the local president, Mrs. Anne Tomlinson, presiding.

MISS NELL E. STINSON

Taking as her subject "Stockholders in a Great and Growing Concern," Miss Stinson reviewed the growth of the teaching profession through its organizations, the National Education Association and the North Carolina Education Association, and pointed up the many services of these.

"Just as we support the profession, so shall we succeed in many activities in which we are engaged," the speaker declared. She emphasized that it is the responsibility of every teacher to have being a good teacher as his or her highest goal, stressing the point that no teacher can fully realize his or her importance and possibilities in the field of education. In closing, she urged the teachers to accept the responsibilities and challenges which are theirs.

Miss Stinson reported on the fine record of Moore County Classroom Teachers and their contributions to the profession, emphasizing the fact that Moore County teachers had voluntarily given $75 to UNESCO for support of the Arah secondary school in Libya and that at present their unit is at the top of the list in gifts to this cause, which is sponsored by the International Committee of the State Association and the Classroom Teachers Association.

Dawson Speaks At Kiwanis Meet On School Problems

Public schools of today are doing a better job of educating than they have ever done. The most serious problem facing public education is scarcity of teachers for the future, what with pupil enrollment in North Carolina increasing by 30,000 a year.

Dr. Amos Dawson, superintendent of schools in Southern Pines, talked on schools in general and in this community in particular before the Sandhills Kiwanis Club on Wednesday. The luncheon meeting was held in the Hollywood Hotel.

Dawson discussed what people want and expect from schools, and what industry expects. The latter, he said, emphasizes the need of a good general education, rather than one to fit graduates for a particular industry. Management tells the educators that, given a well-rounded boy or girl, they can and will train him or her for available jobs. The manufacturer does place emphasis on mathematics and science in that general education.

He reported that tests here in the elementary school had shown the pupils well ahead of the national average. Also, that the three schools in Moore county, Aberdeen, Pinehurst and Southern Pines, which supplement State funds for their support, appear to have a higher rating than the county's schools which are not locally aided. The State support for Southern Pines amounts to approximately $126 per pupil, to which the local school district adds $68, for a total of $194.57. The average State support for schools is $135 per pupil.

New officers of the Kiwanis Club, elected for 1957, will be installed at the meeting to be held next Wednesday at the Hollywood. James D. Hobbs will succeed John L. Ponzer as president.
