THEATRES CAROLINA

Continuing through this Thursday-Saturday, at the Carolina Theatre, is "Walk The Proud Land," the true story of John P. Clum, a former ministry student who at 23 was placed in charge of a dangerous Apache reservation in Arizona. "Walk The Proud Land," attractively photographed in CinemaScope and Technicolor, depicts Clum's adventures during his stay at the Apache Reservation.

Audie Murphy, who does not pack a six-shooter and is often amusingly garbed in a bowler hat and mail-order suit, registers strongly once again as the soft-spoken, no-nonsense Clum. There is ample romantic interest as he becomes involved with two women: Anne Bancroft, an Indian widow whom he receives as a "gift" (although he cannot use her and doesn't want to send her back); and Pat Crowley, as his absent fiancée who finds it difficult to adjust herself to some Indian customs.

During the week of February 10, the Carolina is returning to the Sandhills two of the outstanding screen attractions of the year.

Starting off Sunday through Wednesday at 3, will be the much talked-about and looked-forward-to, "Anastasia."

Providing a superb vehicle for Ingrid Bergman's return to the American screen after a seven-year absence, "Anastasia" is going to be one of the biggest box-office bell-ringers of 1957. Miss Bergman proves decisively that she's lost none of her gracious charm or ability to submerge herself completely in a role.

Yul Brynner and Helen Hayes share top billings in this gripping story about the lost daughter of the Russian czar and an elaborate scheme to legitimize her claim to a fortune. Made in London, Paris, and Copenhagen this production for 20th Century-Fox, in CinemaScope and De Luxe color, is on a grand scale.

Starting Thursday night, February 14, at 8:15, is a return engagement in the Sandhills of another outstanding screen entertainment of the year, "Friendly Persuasion," in Color De Luxe, starring Gary Cooper, Dorothy McGuire, Anthony Perkins, Richard Eyer and Marjorie Main.

William Wyler has converted Jessamyn West's novel into a film of abundant, wholesome, heartwarming charm, one that can proudly hold its head high among the better pictures that currently are emanating from Hollywood, regardless of source or size. In addition to its over-all aura of quaintness, the offering boasts sizable doses of comedy, romance, action, faith—and even a touch of sex.

Wyler mounted the feature with unstinting opulence and in the best of taste, and it is apparent that his deft directorial touches are largely responsible for a bevy of excellent performances by a wisely chosen cast.

The Philmont Scout Ranch near Cimarron, New Mexico, comprising 127,000 acres is the largest Scout camp in the world.
