SECOND HIGHWAY DEATH OF YEAR

Robbins Man Pinned Beneath Auto And Killed; 2 Others Are Injured

Flinton Maness, 28-year-old Negro of Robbins, became Moore County's second highway fatality of the year Friday when his car overturned against a tree and pinned him beneath it.

The accident which the Highway Patrol has said was caused by high speed, occurred on the Talc Mine Road near Robbins.

Three passengers in the car were also thrown out and seriously injured, the Patrol said. They were identified as Robert Williams, 23, and Lynn Thompson, about 40, both of whom were taken to Moore Memorial Hospital, and Robert Simmons, who was thrown clear and not injured. Williams had deep facial lacerations and Thompson a broken neck.

All were from Robbins.

Maness, according to an account related by one of the investigating Patrolmen, apparently left the road on a curve and was out of control more than 700 feet before smashing against an oak tree.

We don't bring them up to run them down. The North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles says it's up to each driver to watch for thoughtless children and make allowances for them in traffic.

You are on borrowed time if you don't know and obey traffic laws says the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles.
