Seven men flycasting on W. O. Moss's pasture lot, was the sight presented to members of the Moore County Wildlife Club, meeting Tuesday night at Mileaway Farm.

The flycasting contest was put on by Eugene Starnes, of the N. C. State College Extension staff and executive director of State's deepsea fishing and game hunting schools.

With car headlights illuminating the scene, the seven flycasting in one practice heat, then in five heats for prizes, were Eugene Kelly, who won first prize; Col. Donald Sandstrom, who won both second and fourth; Bill Spence, third; Bob Edwards, fifth; Albert Tufts, J. T. Overton and T. T. Overton. Judges were Starnes, club president Dr. George Heintz and Herbert Cameron.

Starnes had previously given a demonstration of flycasting with glass spinner rod and reel, emphasizing use of the wrist both for control of the spin and as a major safety factor. He described different kinds of equipment and their uses in both deepsea and freshwater fishing.

The fishing and hunting schools have more than justified their existence as a "continuing education" feature for adults, stressing recreational advantages of North Carolina and as an economic boost, he said.

With reference to the hunting school, held at Southern Pines each year, he said the Sandhills' potential as a hunting area has never been fully realized and the school should help. He urged the cooperation of the club in holding the school, set for October 30-November 4 this fall. The program followed a picnic supper at the Mileaway grill.

Mrs. Crawford New Negro Home Agent for Moore

Miss Ozette Guy, Moore county's first Negro home agent, resigned Tuesday, effective August 15. She told the county commissioners she will go to a similar position in Alamance County.

The commissioners, commending her for "a good job done" in her four years here, accepted the resignation with regret, adopting a resolution of appreciation for her services.

As replacement, they employed Mrs. Eva Mae Crawford, now assistant Negro home agent in Rowan county, on recommendation of Mrs. Josephine S. Weaver, district agent with the State Extension Service. Both Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Crawford attended the commissioners' meeting with Miss Guy.

Mrs. Crawford is a graduate of Barber Scotia College at Concord. She spent the rest of the day in Carthage seeking a place to live when she arrives for work in mid-August.

PRECINCT LINES

(Continued from Page 1) maps, he said he could not find any record of official establishment of precincts and that they are purely traditional, not to be definitely determined by any official means today. There are places all over the county, he declared, where people cannot be sure what precinct they live in and the registrar cannot help them. Also, for this reason, many who should be in one precinct are voting in another.

He said his idea would be to get together a few leading citizens of each precinct, who know the territory and its residents and landmarks, and let them determine the precinct lines according to well-defined boundaries, a highway, river, creek or power line; to make the lines official by publication of a map which would then be on file at Carthage and placed in the hands of each registrar.

The precincts should be drawn according to the needs of today, the population centers as they now exist and the mode and arteries of travel. If such precincts should require changes in township lines, he would then expect the commissioners to act with common sense, for the good of the whole and not to favor any one group, he said.

COUNCIL

(Continued from page 1) on proposed adoption of an ordinance abandoning and quitclaiming a strip of land 62 feet long and .68 of a foot wide, (about seven inches), on New York Ave., at the corner of S. W. Broad St.

The hearing was asked after a survey revealed that the Welch building there extended .68 foot onto town property. Approval of the ordinance would quitclaim the strip of land to the owner of the building, Frank Welch.

SCHOOL FUNDS

(Continued from page 1) in that the county now has no shop, and the garage, nearly 30 years old and poor to start with, is in poor repair. Also, he said, its site on the Carthage school grounds is needed for playground space.

A county school librarian is also a necessity, they said, noting that the system expends between $5,000 and $10,000 per year for new books and has no professionally trained person to handle, disburse, care for and recover them, or teach children their use. Only one school in the system—Aberdeen, which has a tax supplement—has a full-time trained librarian. In other schools, teachers devote their vacant periods to library work.

School board members Phillips and Matthews spoke up vigorously for the salary supplement for Supt. Lee, noting that he had taken a salary cut of $2,000 to come to the county school system from the principalship at Aberdeen, besides leaving a home and summer business there, and that it was on the prospect that all this would be made up to him that he came to the county job. They asserted, "We think we've got one of the best men in the State and we want to keep him. But it isn't fair to ask him to continue to stay at a personal sacrifice."
