Donald S. Morris Named Agricultural Development Engineer For This Area

Carolina Power & Light Company has named an agricultural development engineer to serve its Sanford District, it was announced today by H. Glenn Lee, district manager. The territory to be served includes the area supervised by the Southern Pines CP&L office.

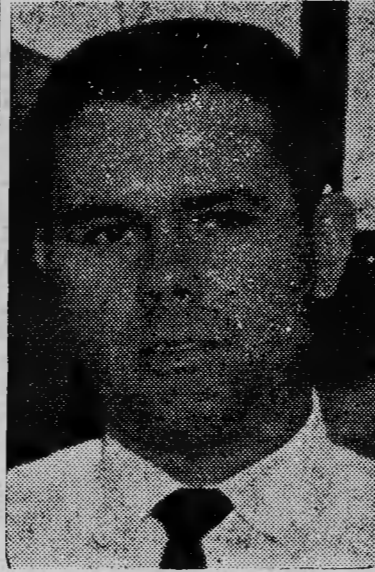

He is Donald S. Morris, a Fremont native and ag-engineering graduate of N. C. State College who has been sales representative for CP&L in Asheboro since 1959.

Lee said Morris' appointment is part of CP&L's new emphasis on agricultural development, successor to the "finer farms" phase of its program for "helping to build a finer Carolina."

Morris will have headquarters in Sanford and his territory will include all areas served by CP&L offices at Sanford, Southern Pines, Pittsboro and Raeford. He will assume the new post November 13 and will work with agricultural agencies and organizations and with individual farmers in promotion of farm electrification as a means of boosting farm income.

Jim Ridout, director of CP&L's agricultural development program, said Morris will coordinate CP&L's stepped-up service to rural customers in the Sanford District.

Morris was reared near Fremont in Wayne County, attended public school there and graduated from N. C. State with a bachelor's degree in ag-engineering in 1959. He joined CP&L's sales staff shortly after graduation and was assigned to the Asheboro office. There he worked closely with 4-H and other farm youth organizations.

DONALD S. MORRIS

He is a Baptist, an Army veteran and member of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

Mrs. Morris is the former Lois Barrow of Lueama. They have one son.

COSTLY DAMAGE

The Highway Department spends about $6 per square foot for the big white on green interstate informational signs and the letters are made of laminated plastic, highly susceptible to damage. Any hard blow against a letter will break the seal which holds it and replacement of the letter or letters is the only repair that is effective.
