

HOUSING SWINE

A change in housing swine has been from the individual farrowing house consisting of two rows of pens with the alleyway in the center and sun porches on the side. One county reports the construction of over 100 of the improved type houses during the past three years. The construction of good houses and better management has resulted in increasing the number of pigs saved per litter.

There is a tendency on many farms to specialize in one phase of hog production. This has been brought about by quality feeder pig sales, with farmers producing feeder pigs to sell to other farmers to feed out hogs for market.

CARTHAGE NEWS

Masons Honored

Carthage Chapter 154, Order of The Eastern Star, honored members of The Carthage 181 A. F. and A. M., and their wives, at the Carthage High School cafeteria by serving them a delicious turkey dinner on October 30.

The tables were decorated with autumn leaves and jack-o-lanterns and bronze chrysanthemums in keeping with the Halloween season.

There were many out-of-town guests present for the occasion; around 60 persons enjoyed the party.

After dinner, a fine program was given. Miss Bonnie Jean Scott sang a solo and young Michael Camp told funny stories. Old fashioned group singing was enjoyed by all.
