Construction of Wildlife Club's
Home Starts Soon

It's the "Moore County Wildlife Club, Inc." now—duly chartered by the State and the owner of an attractive piece of real estate for which exciting plans are being made.

Dr. George Heinitsh, club president, presented the club's new charter last week at the November meeting held at Shields Cameron's cabin, Devils Gut Ranch, on the Old Pinehurst Road. He also presented for inclusion in the permanent records the deed, which has been duly recorded at Carthage, to the acreage east of Kenwood, near Southern Pines, on which the club will build its first home.

Albert Tufts, building committee chairman, told the 50 members present at the meeting that construction would go forward immediately, as the first $1,000 was in sight and the rest would be borrowed as needed. A financing plan has already been approved by the club, calling for annual membership assessments of $7, to be augmented by contributions.

President Heinitsh reported on the State Wildlife Federation convention held recently at Greensboro, over which he presided as retiring president until a new president, Jim Conley of Morganton, was elected. Dr. Heinitsh, concluding a successful year, had declined to run again but will continue on the state board of directors.
