'Star of Bethlehem' Spectacle, Other Exhibits to Be Seen at Planetarium

When the lights fade and the audience gently tilts necks backward to see the gigantic dome, the time-worn hills of Judea appear. Soon there gleams overhead the starry sky as it appeared some 2,000 years ago, in the year 8 B.C.

This is the Morehead Planetarium at Chapel Hill, presenting for some 25,000 Yuletide visitors its colorful spectacle, "Star of Bethlehem."

The traditional program's first part will again be devoted to the appearance of the heavens almost 2,000 years ago, to "the Star," and to astronomical events known to have occurred about the time of the birth of Jesus.

Amid the stars, the reverent pageant tells the story of the Birth of Jesus in scenes of great depth, bathed in colorful lights and against a background of Scriptural readings and beautiful music.

From now through January 8 that message and program is being given 13 times weekly, every night in the week at 8:30 o'clock and at matinees on Saturdays at 11 a.m., 3 and 4 p.m. and on Sundays at 2, 3 and 4 p.m. Only on December 25 and 26 will the Planetarium be closed.

Special "advance reservation" shows for school children will be offered every day at 11 a.m., 1 and 4 p.m. "Star of Bethlehem" is recommended for all grade and age levels. After the children are seated, the public will be admitted. At other times programs are offered to large religious, civic or industrial groups by advance arrangement. But no reservations are required for individuals and groups attending the public nightly and week-end shows.

In addition to "Star of Bethlehem" in the Planetarium chamber, visitors may operate the push-button controlled Copernican Orrery, which graphically demonstrates the movement of planets and moons about the sun.

Other exhibits in the science area include collections of ancient astronomical instruments, weather data recorders, and Space Travel displays. The Art Galleries include exhibits of oils and watercolors and the permanent Genevieve B. Morehead Collection of paintings by great masters. The exhibits may be examined specialty. In 1944, he opened a public stable at Groton, Mass., three years later going to work as trainer and driver for Craig's Cinnamon Ranch, Lamar, Calif. In 1953, when the owner's illness necessitated the sale of the stable, he came to Pinehurst, where his brother was already established as trainer for Octave Blake.

While Del continued with Blake's Newport Farms stable—for which he drove Newport's cream to a $108,000 Hambletonian victory in 1954—Dana leased quarters at the Pinehurst track for his own public stable, training and driving for various owners. The brothers occasionally worked together, and were very close. They built homes side by side on the Airport Road and regarded Pinehurst as home.

As harness-horse racing underwent its great renaissance in post-World War II years, Dana Cameron's name became illustrious as he raced from coast to coast. During his years in California he was a frequent winner in the two great meets held there annually. He drove his last race at the Suffolk Downs track near Boston two weeks before his death.

He was highly sought after as a trainer, and horses he trained won more than their share of glory. He had a special knack with colts, selecting and developing them with care, seeing many go on to the big tracks.

An outgoing, friendly and unassuming person, he had a talent with people as well as horses, numbering close friendships from Maine to California. James Harrison of Hanover, Pa., this week expressing shock at his loss, called him "the best fellow in the business." Paige West, one of the original owners for whom he trained and drove, last spring named his newborn and only son for him.

At the time of his death, Cameron had no debts and was without charge daily from 1 to 5 p.m. and from 7:30 to 10 p.m.; on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and on Sundays from 1 to 10 p.m.

eron had in his stable a dozen horses of three owners, William Chiedeler, James Benston of Chicago and Charlie Ruderman of Governor, N. Y.

Surviving are his wife, the former Audrey Phalen of Newmarket, N. H.; one daughter, Judy, a student at Pinehurst High School; his brother Del, of Pinehurst, and a sister, Mrs. Neville Holland, of Littleton, Mass.

A Happy House Has A Big Heart

The bigger the "heart"—the better the HOUSEPOWER! And a house with a big-enough HOUSEPOWER heart has enough electricity available to let you live better—electrically. Does your home's electrical "heart" have as much capacity as it should? You can find out by asking your electrical contractor or electric utility representative to check over the main fuse or circuit breaker panel. This is the "heart" of your home wiring system—from which electricity is dispatched to various parts of your house and grounds. The total amount of electricity which can be brought into your home at any one time is just equal to the capacity of the main panel. Remember—you never pay for more electricity than you actually use. But, all of your home's present and future use of electric service is limited by the capacity of the Electric Service Entrance. So, it pays in the long run to have it made big enough.
