The Explorer troop that is affiliated with the Church of Wide Fellowship and is sponsored by J. E. Sandlin had a Christmas party last weekend. Hamburgers were served and dancing followed a basketball game on television. The Explorers entertained the girls by trying to fix the TV set which was on the blink for all of the first quarter. The Explorers are doing fine work in many fields. They have excellent programs and parties once a month.

On December 11, the band and glee club performed for the PTA. The concert is held annually for the enjoyment of the parents and teachers. The band performed first, with a few classical selections followed by Christmas carols. The band played "Air for Band", a classical suite in one movement with allegro and waltz sections. They played a medley from Hansel and Gretel, followed by a three-movement selection of spirituals. Then a rhapsody based on "Jingle Bells," and other selections that fitted within the theme of the Christmas story were played.

The glee club sang Christmas carols and songs that have been so long associated with Christmas such as "Winter Wonder Land." The favorite "Twelve Days of Christmas" and the "Night Before Christmas" were played.

School Christmas Program Given; Many Take Part

The East Southern Pines High School and glee club joined students of the elementary school in presenting a Christmas program for the elementary school in Weaver Auditorium Wednesday morning, the last day of school before vacation began. Both organizations performed under the direction of William McAdams. Attending were children of the first through sixth grades. The band played Bizet's "March of the Kings" and "Jingle Bells." The glee club sang a musical arrangement of "Twas the Night before Christmas," accompanied with projection of colored slides on an auditorium wall, and also two other selections "Sleigh Ride" and "White Christmas." The fourth grade played carols on tonettes, directed by Mrs. Sara Hodgkins, the schools music teacher. The third grade sang "Silent Night" in Spanish. In contrast, Anne Niles of the sixth grade sang the same song in German.

Taking part in a special presentation of "The Twelve Days of Christmas" were 12 children—Judy Lane, Janet Ponzer, Helen Scott, Bobby Warlick, Freddy McRee, Elizabeth Sipple, Peter Gilmore, Rosemary Wallace, Diana Matthews, Ruth Allred, Danny Thomas and Wally McAdams.

Luther A. Adams, superintendent of schools, did the traditional reading of "Twas the Night Before Christmas," just before the glee club's musical presentation of the famous poem.

fore Christmas" were sung with color slides accompanying the latter. The glee club had presented a short concert at the Civic Club that afternoon.

The comments on the performances were favorable. Many persons said that the band and glee club had never sounded so good. For the first time in years, it was noted, the band sounded full, like a concert band.

The band and glee club again sang their full program for the junior and senior high schools. Mr. McAdams is very pleased to see that the townspeople are taking an interest in the band. It stands to reason that people will take an interest in any band that sounds good.

If you wish to help the band, please contact Mr. Bill McAdams.

the director, or mail contributions to Mr. McAdams, in care of the school, or Mrs. J. S. Hiatt, Jr., both residents of Southern Pines.

Traffic Safety

Contrary to what most adults believe, teenagers are taking an interest in the automobile problem that faces Southern Pines in view of the several recent fatal traffic accidents in town. Teenagers are often pictured as "hot rodders" and careless drivers. It is true statistically that teenagers have more accidents but it is also true that teenagers are taking a more active interest in safe driving. The recent deaths of two young men in an accident on Midland Road caused teenagers to think about safe driving, and on Tuesday many students, including this writer, saw a woman die after a collision of two automobiles near the high school.

Some students have received tickets for speeding and other traffic violations, but the majority of them believe that something should be done about traffic accidents and are anxious to do what they can to help. None of them want to see his classmates lying dead on our roads. Many young people think that both teenagers and adults should be tested more often on their driving skill and made more aware of the traffic laws of the state.
