Reddy says:

"You work me harder in winter!"

Reddy's not complaining. He likes to help you keep warm and comfortable.

But—he also has this timely reminder. Short, sunless days and long, cold nights call for more kilowatts for just about everything electrical in your home. And the harder Reddy works, the more his wages are reflected in your service bill.

You and your family spend lots more time indoors these days. For instance, the amateur chef and the outdoor grill have retired for the winter. Now your electric range and small appliances help prepare even more hot meals and snacks.

The automatic heating system is in use practically all the time. Your electric water heater must heat water that enters the house at much colder temperatures. In fact all your electrical servants, such as lighting, TV, radios and space heaters, are working longer hours for you.

That's why Reddy reminds us that when the weather is roughest is when he works hardest for our comfort and convenience. When you think of all the ways he helps around the house, electricity is still a mighty big bargain in the family budget.
