WEST END NEWS

White Cane Drive

A special drive is being held this month by the Lions Club in behalf of the White Cane Drive and their work with the blind. At the meeting Thursday night, district director of the North Carolina Eye Bank, W. D. Little of Fair Bluff, spoke in behalf of the Bank. The Lions Club members were presented forms which specified they willed their eyes to the Bank. Any other adult, over 21, wishing to will his eyes, should contact Lion M. H. Tucker, or any of his fellow Lions.

Special guests of the club were Mr. and Mrs. John Bolton, who were presented a white cane by Lion Tucker. The white cane is presented to a person who is blind in order that all courtesies and care may be extended to him at all times.

Also at the meeting was Lion International Counselor J. D. Peacock, of Lumberton.

Dinner Meeting
The Volunteer Fire Department gave a dinner Thursday night, with representatives from the outlying areas of the fire district and fire commissioners as special guests. Plans were discussed whereby Shamrock Farm, Jackson Springs, Culdee, and the Thomas Town and Harris Crossroads sections might be protected with fire control measures. Present for the meeting also were Hugh Jackson of Carthage and Henry Williams of Robbins, members of the County Rural Fire Commission.

MOUNTAIN ATTRACTIONS

Spring signals the reopening of seasonal attractions in the mountain vacationlands — Grandfather Mountain with its mile-high swinging bridge near Linville; Tweetsie Railroad, an authentic narrow-gauge line of long ago which operates for a three-mile scenic trip near Blowing Rock; the Museum of North Carolina Minerals on the Blue Ridge Parkway in a region noted for mineral and gem collecting; the Thomas Wolfe Memorial, "Dixieland" of Look Homeward, Angel at Asheville, and pioneer exhibits in the Great Smoky National Park and along the Blue Ridge Parkway.

A new waterside theatre for "The Lost Colony" was constructed in 1961 to replace the storm-damaged structure housing the nation's oldest outdoor drama, and this Roanoke Island drama enjoyed its most successful season in years.

Scottish Magazine Carries Article "North Carolina Scots," by MacDonald

An article sure to interest Tarheels, especially, perhaps, those of Moore and Robeson counties, appears this week in Scotland's Magazine under the title "North Carolina Scots."

The article is written by Donald MacDonald and his wife, Scottish Mairie, who live in Scotland.

Well-remembered in the state as the young man who donned a kilt and was the power behind the revival of highland tradition in the state, MacDonald writes of the Highland Games at Grandfather Mountain, the Laurinburg high school band, dressed in kilts, and the singing of old ballads, with detailed descriptions of Flora Macdonald College and various historic spots.

Leaving the Charlotte News, afternoon paper for which he had worked as a reporter for several years, young MacDonald made several trips to the home of his forefathers and, becoming bewitched by the ancient culture and history, threw all his energies into bringing it back to North Carolina, already deeply tied-in with the Scottish culture. MacDonald was instrumental, with historians of the section, in reestablishing the site of the home of Flora Macdonald near Mt. Gilead, where a gathering was held two years ago and a historical marker erected.

The article is lavishly illustrated with photographs of various Carolina gatherings. Mention is made of towns, rivers, and sections bearing Scottish names, including Aberdeen in Moore County, with the explanation that "abar" means "mouth of" and "deen" stands for "death" or "dee" and the river of that name. The MacDonald article closes with the following descriptive paragraph: "In Scotland, 'frae John O'Groats tae the Mull o'Gal-lawa' describes the length of the land—encompassing both Highlands and Lowlands. In Scottish North Carolina 'Highlands' and 'Lowlands' are actually the names of towns at the two extreme ends of the state. Between these two communities, and populated by thousands of 'Southern accent' Americans who proudly wear the kilt and trace their roots to Caledonia—lies 'New Scotland, North Carolina.'"

Rounds to Judge Young People's Story Contest

Glen H. Rounds, Southern Pines author and illustrator, has been named a judge in the Scholastic Writing Awards contest, world's largest literary competition for high school students.

He will be one of 27 prominent American authors, critics and educators who will select the best entries from approximately 160,000 original manuscripts submitted by youngsters in public and parochial schools in the U. S., its possessions and Canada.

The annual creative writing competition, sponsored by W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co. and conducted by Scholastic Magazines in New York, is now in its 37th year. Entries of short stories, essays, poems and dramatic scripts close March 1 and the names of winning students will be announced in May.

Mr. Rounds will judge entries in the junior short story division of the Awards competition.
