Mrs. Michael T. Pishko was elected president of the Silver Foils Club at its annual meeting and tea held last week at the Pinehurst Country Club. About 75 active and associate members of the women's golfing organization attended the social get-together, highlight of which was the awarding of Silver Foils Championship medals.

Other officers elected at a later meeting of the board of governors were: Mrs. John R. Burr, vice president; Mrs. John W. Lindsay, treasurer; and Mrs. Walter G. Robins, secretary.

Elected to the board of governors for three-year terms were Mrs. John B. von Schlegel, Mrs. David R. Riach and Mrs. Morrison B. Orr.

Eighteen new members were taken into the Silver Foils Club this season; 153 different members have played in 23 tournaments to date. Mrs. Dennis C. Crotty has participated in all 23 and Mrs. Clement R. Monroe and Mrs. Riach have played in 21 each.

Masters Sidelights

This year's Masters tournament at Augusta was exciting and unpredictable as ever, with the largest entry in its 26-year history.

Veteran pro Horton Smith, the only entry who has competed in all 26 Masters tournaments, played under a health handicap—he has been in and out of hospitals all season.

He and amateur Richard D. Chapman, former Pinehurst resident now of Palm Beach, had the dubious distinction of turning in the highest scores for the first two days—180 and 164.

The rugged terrain, tough pin placements, and other natural and man-made traps for the unwary on the Augusta National course, are always mental hazards for Chapman, and he rarely lasts beyond the first two or three days of play; but like all who are attracted to play in the yearly classic, he enjoys the fellowship of goldfom's elite.

The most untalkative man we ever met, Mid Pines pro Julius Boros, though unable to follow up his brilliant first day lead in the event for another Masters victory, still finished well up among the money winners.

"In the spring, a young man's fancy—" In the spring, the fancy of everyone, even the unlikely, seems to turn to thoughts of golf in Pinehurst.

We talked by telephone last week with violinist Roman Totenberg, who has been a soloist twice with the Pinehurst Forum, and who both times, stayed over for several days of golf here.

He was in Salisbury Thursday, with his wife, to give a concert at Catawba College, and his first words, after greeting us, were: "We wanted so much to come to Pinehurst for some golf."

The artist, who gives concerts

all over this country and will make a tour in Europe this summer, teaches violin two days a week at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore. He also is on the teaching staff at the Mannes College of Music in New York and a teacher and member of the board of directors at the Aspen Institute in Colorado, so finds precious little time for the relaxation of golf, and the wistful longing to "unlimber" on the Pinehurst courses was very apparent in his voice.

And speaking of voices, when the L. D. operator finally located the Totenbergs, after a heroic job of tracking them all over the Catawba campus and all over Salisbury, the switchboard operator at the Holiday Inn, where they were staying, said in an aside to the operator, "Man, you ought to hear him talk!"

True, the Polish lilt is still present (we suspect he talks his attractive American wife along partly as an interpreter), but we find it pleasant to hear and not at all difficult to understand.

Paris Pontificates

Paris, which speaks with supreme authority on the subject of haute couture, recently decreed the "short, short coiffure." So, after two years spent trying to achieve a passable version of the Paris-decreed "French twist," we meekly trotted off to our hair stylist (also sporting the croph-headed look) to be shorn.

Now Paris is pontificating in a different field—on cigarette smoking. Centre de Propagande Anti-Tabac has announced that over 8,000 heavy smokers, many of them physicians, have stopped smoking because of a new formula which reduces the desire to smoke.

And when we've just broken in a gorgeous, diamond-studded cigarette holder!
