CLASSROOM BUILDING—A new classroom building for Sanford Business College is shown here in a drawing by the architects, Hayes, Howell and Associates, of Southern Pines. It will accommodate more than 100 students. The college has many Moore County graduates and young people from this county are almost always numbered among the student body.

Work Begins on New Building for Sanford College

Construction has begun on a new classroom building for Sanford Business College. The building will be erected on U. S. 1 bypass between Wicker Street Extension and Caribon Road, near Sanford, Merritt Robinson, school director, said today.

Designed to accommodate more than 100 students, the new structure will have five classrooms, a library and office space. Additions may be added from time to time as the growth of the school requires.

Fully air conditioned and outfitted with the latest classroom and office equipment, the new work represents an estimated investment of over $70,000.

Construction will take about five months and is scheduled to be completed September 15. John William Brown is General Contractor.

The new building will enable the school to expand the courses of study. Present general courses of study include: Stenographic, General Business, Secretarial, Junior Accounting, and Business Administration. Special courses in a number of business subjects are also offered, Robinson stated.

Lee YDC Planning Rally at Sanford

Officers and steering committee of the Lee County Young Democrats Club have revealed plans for an Eighth Congressional District Rally to be held at Sanford Wednesday, April 25.

The event will be held at the Lions Fairgrounds and will begin at 7 p.m. with a barbecue supper.

Announced speakers include Rep. A. Paul Kitchin and John K. Kennedy, Congressional Democratic candidates from the District. Governor Sanford and the Council of State will be invited, as well as Lee County officials and candidates.
