Kennedy Library Fund Drive Will Be Kept Open

Moore County's collection of funds for the proposed John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library at Cambridge, Mass., is being kept open, as in the state-wide fund drive for $230,000, John A. McPhaul, county chairman, said this week.

The county has raised about $1,000 toward a quota of $1,380, McPhaul said, expressing confidence that the entire amount will be received.

A group from Moore County was among the 15,000 persons who gathered in Kenan Stadium at Chapel Hill Sunday afternoon for the impressive North Carolina Tribute to President John F. Kennedy. The late President's mother, Mrs. Joseph Kennedy, his brother, Sen. Edward Kennedy, and Evangelist Billy Graham, were among the speakers. Early this week, the State lacked about $30,000 of reaching its $230,000 goal. Gov. Terry Sanford and State Tribute Chairman Hugh Morton said that the full amount will be sought.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, widow of the assassinated President, told Gov. Sanford this week that the Chapel Hill tribute was the "nicest thing that has happened to us."

Yard Fire Out In Record Time

A call of "Fire!" and the familiar two toots on the siren brought the Fire Department to the scene in record time Tuesday morning.

The fire, a small blaze in a yard at 160 South Leak Street, was extinguished, "before it had burned a patch more than five feet square," said Joe Garzik, chief of the volunteer fire fighters.

But he agreed that, given the tinder-dry state of the country, brought on by the excessive drought, and the crowded neighborhood, a local department that is on the job is essential if grave disaster was to be avoided.

Said Town Manager Rainey: "In times like these, any fire out-of-doors is potentially a great danger. We depend on the efficiency and speed of our department, but at the same time, I want to urge all citizens to be doubly careful at this dangerous time. Remember last year's fire and be careful!"
