40-Year Try

A veteran caddy, who says he has been trying for 40 years to win the annual caddy tournament here, last Monday realized his ambition. Robert Robinson, known as "Hardrock" by his colleagues and his customers, turned in a gross 76 to defeat last year's titleholder, Fletcher Gaines, who took the runner-up prize with a gross 78.

About 100 local caddies took part in the all-day event, played every spring over one of the courses at the Pinehurst Country Club.

"Hardrock," who has caddied for many of the top players here during his years at the club, was the favorite caddy of the late Pinehurst resident and course architect, Donald J. Ross, who was a golf professional before he came here from his native Scotland.

Pinehurst Popularity

Appearing in the May issue of the N. C. Travel Bulletin, published by the Travel Information Division of the Department of Conservation and Development, is what looks like a pick-up from one of the spring Cracker Barrels, seasonal publication of the Pinehurst Press Bureau. Headed "For 'Golf State, USA,'" the plug for Pinehurst, and the Pine Crest Inn, states:

Popularity of Pinehurst with golfing groups who return year after year is well known, and well illustrated by "The Cotton Pickers" who come year after year to the Pinecrest and play 36 holes a day. Who's who of this group of 8 executives: John Ford, vice-president of Chrysler Corp.; Bruce Bryant, CBS vice president in charge of national advertising; Dave Nyran, TV vice president of Dancer-Fitzgerald - Sample; Copeland Robinson, advertising manager of Liggett & Myers; William Nollman, sales representative for Life Magazine; Robert Dingwall of Charles Hoyt Co.; Richard Ayers, president of Chase Bag Corp.; and advertising executive S. W. MacMurray of Greenwich, Conn.

We're always glad to pass along a plug, both for Pinehurst, and for the Pine Crest whose owner-managers, Bob and Betty Barrett, do such a fine, and apparently effortless job of providing good service, a relaxed atmosphere and an out-of-this-world cuisine for the full house which they maintain almost constantly throughout the season.

JANICE FIELDS, incoming president of the Pinehurst chapter, Future Homemakers of America, has been chosen the local chapter delegate to attend the National FHA Convention in Chicago. She will leave Raleigh July 13, returning home July 17. Janice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Fields, Jr. The Pinehurst FHA chapter helped raise the money to send a delegate to the meeting with various projects, including a successful fruitcake sale at Christmastime, and a bake sale later in the year.

In recent years, medical research has provided effective methods for treating many types of stroke and restoring patients to self-sufficiency, according to the North Carolina Heart Association.

Congratulations and best of luck to each of you.
