W. O. Carey Dies After Collision; Wife Is Injured

William O. Carey, 76, retired executive who had lived here since 1962, was fatally injured in an automobile accident Friday about 12:30 p.m.

State Troopers Gerald Cain and R. R. Samuels, investigating, said the Careys' car was involved in a collision with one driven by Sgt. Ronald Fulmore of Fort Bragg, at the intersection of East Indiana Avenue Extension and the Aberdeen-Fort Bragg Road.

The Careys' car, proceeding east on Indiana with Mrs. Carey driving, the troopers reported, was struck by Sgt. Fulmore proceeding north toward Fort Bragg. The Carey car was spun about in the intersection, coming to rest heading back toward Southern Pines on Indiana.

The soldier was unhurt. Mr. and Mrs. Carey were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he died within an hour, with a brain injury. (Continued on page 5)

Wage-Hour Suit Asks $33,118

From Local Firm

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has brought suit in the United States District Court at Rockingham against Carolina Company, Inc., and Jack Hicks, of Southern Pines, to recover $33,118.46 in minimum wage and/or overtime pay allegedly due 199 of the defendant's employees.

The Secretary's complaint also alleges that the defendants, manufacturers of candles, soap and other toilet preparations, are in violation of the record-keeping and shipment in commerce provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Julian E. Parker, supervisor of the Wage-Hour field office at Raleigh, said workers engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce must be paid at least $1.25 an hour and not less than one and one-half times their regular rates for all hours in excess of 40 in a workweek.

Litigation resulted from investigations made by members of Parker's staff.

Dedication Ceremonies Held For Penick Home

The Bishop Edwin A. Penick Memorial Home, the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina's Home for the Aging, was dedicated Saturday afternoon with a program of speeches and prayer.

The speaking program, featuring an address by Governor Terry Sanford, was held outdoors from a stand facing the three-winged building, before an audience of some 350 persons who had come from all over the State.

The dedication services and benediction were conducted by Bishop Richard H. Baker of the Diocese of North Carolina in the Home, after a burst of rain towards the end of the program sent the crowd scurrying for shelter.

But an inspection and tour of the Home were on the agenda anyway, and these were enjoyed by many of the visitors, with Mr. and Mrs. John L. MacDougall, administrators, and residents of the Home acting as hosts.

In his address, Governor Sanford commended the church for the building of the Home, as he said, "This is part of our new recognition of the importance of the individual and the responsibility which we have toward each one."

He noted that one out of every 14 citizens of the State is 75 years old or older, and that "the rest of us have deep obligations toward them. Even if we did not heed our religious teachings which bid us honor and care for them, this would be in our own best interest as well as theirs. They have done so much for us and have still so much of importance to contribute."

"The church is right to concern

DEMOCRATIC RECORD CITED

Dan Moore, In Carthage Visit, Calls For Unity

Dan Moore, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, stopped briefly in Carthage this (Thursday) morning on his 100-county tour to bind up party wounds and inspire unity in November.

About 125 of the party faithful were waiting at the courthouse when the big chartered bus arrived, only a few minutes late, for the scheduled 10 am stop.

Greeted by County Democratic

Chairman J. Elvin Jackson and H. H. Grimm, Moore's campaign manager last spring, the candidate smiled and shook hands his way around the group. Setting the example for unity with a warm greeting was M. G. Boyette, who served as county chairman last spring for Richardson Preyer, and other members of the former Preyer following were also on hand.

With Judge Moore were Dr. Bill James, Eighth District Congressional candidate, who joined him at Carthage for the trip to Troy, Albemarle and Charlotte, and arriving from Raleigh (via Pittsboro) with him were Attorney General Wade Bruton and several newsmen.

Presented by Chairman Jackson, Moore spoke from the steps on the west side of the courthouse, since the courtroom was in use for the civil term.

When this tour, which opened Monday, is completed he will have visited each county in the State at least three times, he noted, adding that "I have been to Moore County many times, and I assure you that as your governor I will return many times, and work with you on what is best for the future of your county."

Recognizing the Republican threat in November, Moore asked all-out Democratic support, not only for himself but for your local candidates and Dr. James."

"Let's forget primaries and personalities and go forward together. It's not a question now of Dan Moore, Judge Preyer or Beverly Lake but of the people of North Carolina, and all the things that concern their future in our State. That is in the best tradition of our party."

Recapitulating the State's progress of the past 60 years in education, industrial development, highways and other facets, he urged, "We must keep in leadership the party which has given us this progress. This is a great State with a great future, and let's all work for that future."

Without getting down to specifics of that future, he thanked those who had come out and cut the speech short in the interest of visiting a tobacco warehouse. The Victory was the one with the morning sale, and farmers, buyers and warehousemen were surprised a few minutes later when the familiar figure showed up in their midst, smiling and shaking hands all around before hitting the road again.
