

Suggestions For Using Fertilizer Obtainable

Whether a person is growing 100 acres of corn, a row of tomatoes or a lawn, he has fertilizer decisions to make. How much fertilizer... what kind of fertilizer... when to apply it.

The 1965 fertilizer suggestions published by North Carolina State should make those decisions easier. Scientists at the college have used the latest research information to compile the easy-to-follow suggestions. Free copies of the 1965 fertilizer suggestions can be obtained from the offices of county agricultural extension agents or by writing directly to the Department of Agricultural Information at N. C. State, Raleigh.

AT LEE COUNTY INDUSTRIAL CENTER

Bricklaying, Carpentry, Refrigeration, Practical Nursing Courses Announced

Persons interested in taking a six months training course in Bricklaying or in Carpentry should contact the Employment Security Commission Office at 219 South Steele Street, in Sanford, telephone 775-2241.

Both of these courses will be conducted by the Lee County Industrial Education Center. A person who is eligible can take one of the courses but no one can be enrolled in both courses at the same time.

Garland Scott of the Employment Security Office said that subsistence pay and allowances will be paid to persons taking this training.

Classes were to begin today (January 14), but it is expected that additional students can be accommodated if they get in touch with the Center at once.

Refrigeration Course
The Lee County Industrial Education Center will conduct registration for a 36-hour course in Refrigeration Theory, on Monday and Tuesday, January 18 and 19, from 7 to 9 pm. Applicants may register in person, by mail or phone.

The course will start on January 21, and meet each Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 10 pm. Total cost including books and instrumental fees is $10. Richard (Dick) Suddarth, a refrigeration technician will be the instructor.

This is the first of a series of courses in the refrigeration and air conditioning area, said an announcement from the Center. The course will include the study of: Introduction to Refrigeration; Heat and Temperature; Nature and Effect of Heat Energy in Refrigeration; Sensible Heat in a Refrigerant; Latent Heat and Pressure in Refrigeration; Transfer of Heat; Basic Needs of Heat Transfer; Refrigeration Systems; Cycles and Classification; Insulation; The Evaporator; Condenser Design; Temperature Measurement, Indicators, Controls and Recorders; Refrigerants and Driers.

Practical Nursing
Applications are now being accepted for the one-year Practical Nurse Education Course at The Center, is announced by W. A. Martin, president.

The course will begin in April, but prospective students should make application at once in order to complete physical and dental examinations. Applicants
