Through the quiet night and bustling day:

from polar shows and from torrid hests.

Wherever the rules of the lightning boats:

I come with my message of deep import.

And talk for men through its avtul rear:

As I flash my words over land and sen.

Sometimes the mortal hand that takes

My hand in his, will cause mistakes,

And are never heard by the far away:

They wait on me with a steady gate.

And many a story concealed from men,

Is open as day to their wakefal kea.

Is not all brought to public view;

But then, dear friends, the good I do,

And the question is to test my worth,

If I should cease in my endless run.

To fill my place, what could be done !

For I do my work are the engine starts,

In town, in country, in foreign marts;
