WARNINGS OF NATURE.

Signals of Safety and Danger That Men Should Heed.

For those who have eyes to see them kindly Nature hangs out signs of all kinds. She only asks that men will use their eyes, says Pearson's Weekly. If they can and do so, she will never betray them. She has both good and bad signs, which are as plain in their way as red or green lights to a railway engine driver.

For instance, what is called the low country of the northern Transvaal is partly healthy, partly feverish. In one spot you may camp in safety for a month; in another, not a mile away, the dreaded fever will seize you in a single night. To uneducated eyes there seems little or no difference in the outward aspect of the two places, but your old prospector is never caught camping on fever ground. He knows the fever tree too well. The fever tree is an odd and sinister looking piece of vegetation, with twisted, greenish trunk and branches, and grows only in those spots where fever mist hangs at nightfall.

So, too, in Florida when a hunter is traversing the immense swamps—"hammocks," as they are called—which cover huge tracts in the southern part of that state, he searches for a spot where pine trees rear their tall heads among the cypresses and gums. There he can camp and sleep in safety, though to spend a night but a few hundred yards away from the pines might mean a bone racking dose of ague.

Many an Australian explorer has been saved from a horrible death by thirst because he has known the water mallee. This tree, though it may stand in the midst of a burning desert, invariably tells of water below the surface. If the traveler be not too far gone to dig he will find the precious fluid below the mallee's roots.

The Mississippi storm of 1784, which is generally supposed to have been the worst gale that has ever been recorded and the result of which was to wipe out nearly twenty settlements, flood 10,000 square miles of land and permanently change the course of the great river, was preceded by a strange and at the same time inexplicable moaning sound, which went on for three days and seemed to come from the upper air, although below all was still. The Indians heard it and left for the high ground; the whites heard it, stayed where they were and were drowned.

In Honor of Miss Lessie Graves.

Smithfield, Dec. 8.—The Card Party given Thursday evening by Mrs. N. M. Lawrence, Jr., in honor of Miss Lessie Graves, of Carthage, was one of the most delightful social events of the season.

Progressive Whist was the game played, and the visitor's prize, a lovely pearl necklace, was won by Miss Graves. The second, a box of Huyler's, was won by Miss Katie Lee Banks. After the game delicious refreshments were served.

Those present were Miss Lessie Graves, of Carthage; Miss Mary B. Williams, of Oxford; Miss Katie Lee Banks, Miss Lena Hicks, Miss Annie McGuire, Miss Josephine Shue, Miss Marie Abell, and Mrs. H. L. Skinner; Messrs. R. R. Holt, J. A. Campbell, J. N. Cobb, H. P. Stevens, H. L. Skinner, N. M. Lawrence, Jr., Dr. A. H. Rose.—News and Observer.

He Knew She Was Operatin'.

During court last week an old darkey was on the stand in behalf of the government, giving testimony about a blockade still in his neighborhood. He told where it was located and said he had been to it one time and got a dram. The district attorney asked: "Well, uncle, was the still running?" "Well, now, boss," replied the darkey, "I can't say as to dat, but I hones'ly swah 'oh God, she shorn wuz operatin'!"—Wilkesboro Chronicle.
