TO WAGE WAR ON ILLITERACY.

Miss Elizabeth Kelly and Miss Coin to Lead the Fight. Lay Emphasis on Young. Promoters of Literacy, Will Give Much Attention To Those of 14 Years and Up.

Raleigh, August 19.—War against illiteracy in North Carolina is given tremendous impetus by Miss Elizabeth Kelly, late of the Johnston County schools, and Miss Coin, of Chicago, who have dignified quarters in the State department and direct the movements of the captains from that eminence.

Miss Kelly, who comes to take a work which became national through Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, has dropped down to brass tacks. The earlier phases of these campaigns had so much of novelty and spectacularism, old duffer of 91 trying to learn to read before ladies of 90 could turn the trick. This had much of romance in the earlier months, but soon the evil of that alone became apparent. The moonlight or night schools were not getting the material that can be so much more easily mastered and used.

Without chilling the enthusiasm of those who wish to learn to read and write even at 100, the promoters of literacy have laid the emphasis upon those of 14 and upward who give every promise of becoming literate and that early. In many counties it is hoped to have a special superintendent to do the work against illiteracy. The State last General Assembly appropriated $50,000 for this work and it has undertaken in a business-like way the burden of removing the stigma from North Carolina. In many counties it is believed enough money can be raised in addition to employ a special county commissioner or superintendent.—W. T. Bost, in Greensboro News.

KENLY STATE HIGH SCHOOL.

Next Session To Open Monday, September 10th. Members of Faculty.

Kenly, Aug. 19.—"It is my purpose," says Professor M. B. Andrews, who has just returned to Kenly, "to put forth every possible effort in making the Kenly State High School more efficient than it has ever been before."

Superintendent and Mrs. M. B. Andrews have returned to the Dormitory of the Kenly school after having spent, as they report, a delightful vacation in Goldsboro and Mount Olive. School will open Monday morning, September 10th. The Dormitory will be conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Andrews with Mrs. B. F. Greer, of Jacksonville, acting as matron. Mrs. Greer comes to Kenly as an efficient and experienced woman. She has one small child—a girl.

Eleven grades will be offered again this year, and a large enrollment is both expected and desired. Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Johnson, formerly of St. Pauls, have been elected to succeed Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Brickhouse, who were members of the Faculty last year. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of the Law School at Wake Forest and is a teacher of experience and success. Miss M. L. Morley, of Lumber Bridge, has been elected music teacher; she comes to the community well recommended. Miss Augusta McKirthen, of Carthage, has been elected to take charge of the second and third grades. The members of the Faculty are as follows:

M. B. Andrews, Superintendent; H. P. Johnson, Principal; Mrs. H. P. Johnson, the sixth and seventh grades; Miss Gladys Barnes Wallace, the fourth and fifth grades; Miss Augusta McKirthen, the second and third grades; Miss Rena Edgerton, the first grade; Miss M. L. Morley, the Department of Music; and Mrs. B. F. Greer, Matron of the Dormitory.

Death of An Aged Man At Clayton.

About five o'clock on Thursday of last week, Mr. William J. Y. Thurston died in Clayton at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Massey. He was eighty-two years old. He died of bronchial pneumonia which brought him to his end in about ten days after he was taken ill. The burial took place in Clayton cemetery Friday afternoon. His funeral was preached by Rev. A. C. Hamby. He was well known over this county, having done business with many of its citizens. He was a man of wonderful energy and continued in business as long as he could get around to do business. He was one of our oldest citizens and many will hear of his death with regrets.

SHARP REACTION IN COTTON.

Prices at One Time Down 200 Points From Yast Week's Top Levels.

It has been aptly said that cotton is nothing if not erratic, and now prices are likely to move from one day to another puzzles not a few people. The rapid upturn of early last week, when October went to 26½ cents and the rest of the new crop months to about the 26¼ cent basis, encouraged some to think that the market was headed one way only; but Monday of this week saw the list down 200 points from these levels, except March, which lost 184 points, to be exact, and the local quotation 190 points under the top of August 7. This means that it fell from 28 cents to 26.10 cents within five days and, though a rally followed, both the actual staple and futures are now around $9 a bale, or some 180 points, below their recent highest position. Such fluctuations have not infrequently been exceeded during the war period, but they are sufficiently striking to illustrate the abnormal conditions prevailing and explain why action has been taken to limit price changes to three cents in any one session.

If disappointing to some speculators, other people have found reason for encouragement in the fact that weather and crop advices have made more cheerful reading. The situation in those parts of Texas where rainfall has been deficient has left a good deal to be desired, but the general tendency is to raise estimates of the yield for the belt as a whole and there is an increasing disposition to regard the Government's recent condition estimate of 70.3 per cent as being too low. Taken in the main, sentiment is bearish on the theory that the crop will turn out better than was earlier expected and that when it begins to move in volume the weight of the bales will tell on prices. Other arguments are also heard as to why the market should work downward, including the curtailment of operations at British mills that is to begin in September, and some capital has been made out of the reduction in domestic consumption in July as compared with previous months this year. Yet the total of 541,000 bales of lint cotton used in this country last month can hardly be termed a poor showing, and it is observed that in the season which ended with July the quantity consumed was 403,000 bales larger than in the previous year, 6,801,000 bales against 6,398,000.—Dun's Review, 18th.
