It is a patriotic duty to attend and no one should permit anything of an ordinary nature to keep him from this meeting.

Mr. J. D. Stephenson, of the Smithfield police force, returned Tuesday from Camp Lee at Petersburg, Va., where he went to carry three young negro men to become soldiers in Uncle Sam's army. Mr. Stephenson found two of these men at saw mills near Selma and brought them before the Local Board here, who turned them over to him with instructions to deliver them safely to the Camp at Petersburg. One of them gave his name as Claude Blake, of Lenoir county, and the other Charlie Brinson, of Duplin county. The third was taken by Chief C. R. Turner and policeman Stephenson while he was fishing on the banks of Neuse river near Smithfield. He gave his name as Abe Wright, of Pittsburg, Pa. Neither of these negroes had filled out their questionnaires.

A Birthday Party.

At the home of Mrs. T. W. LeMay on Oakland Heights Tuesday afternoon from four to five-thirty quite a number of little folks assembled in honor of little Zoe LeMay's ninth birthday.

A feature of amusement was pinning on the donkey's tail. Each child was blind-folded and told to find the donkey. This caused much laughter among the little guests. Little Virginia Williamson was the lucky one in this contest.

Then they were invited into the dining room. Here they found the birthday cake on which were the lighted candles in the center of the table. The decorations were crepe paper and yellow jonquils.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. T. W. LeMay and daughter, Margaret, assisted by Mrs. C. B. Williamson. Then the birthday cake was cut, and Master Hugh Ragsdale found the prize, a dime, hidden in his slice. Those present were: Virginia Broadhurst, Ellen Battle Patterson, Mildred Cotter, Virginia Williamson, Elizabeth Creech Juanita Sorrell, Bill Hooks, William Lassiter, Herman Lawrence, Hugh Ragsdale, Raymond Woodall, Joe Cotton and Watson Wharton.

He was wanted by the United States authorities and was turned over to Deputy George Moore who carried him before United States Commissioner, Dr. Noble, at Selma. He was held in a five hundred dollar bond, and in default of same was lodged in jail.

Caught with the Goods.

Will Eason, colored, from Bentonsville township, was here last Monday with an automobile advertising his business and retailing blockade whiskey. He claimed it to be fresh from the still and only one day old. He claimed also that his price of $1.50 per pint or $12.00 per gallon was lower than many others were charging. Just before he had unloaded his cargo he was apprehended, one pint of his stock being still left over in the car. He was taken before Smithfield's Mayor, who bound him over to court, and instead of putting him in jail he was passed over to the Recorders Court, where he got a year's sentence to the roads. He is now helping to work and make the Smithfield township roads better. Let others come. We can use to advantage more men on the roads.
