MISCELLAANEOUS

TO MY FRIEND BThe other day, I chanc
A little piece of poetry: A Itttle piecc or poetry: Htrad fought disease &c bravely stood; Glad tidings these to him, no doubt, Whowrote; or found 1 only write that you may see I only write that you may My specimen of poetry; Thr poets only write for fame, T've seen the time, when I cield My pen, like Fercules his shield:
I've scen the time when with re I hurl'd my darts at Buzzurd towin, It's stables, dom roar, Prostrate they Prostrate they fell, to rise no more
But time, that crer eating But time, that ever eating moth,
Has putain end to sprightly youth, Tho, even now, I scarce refrain From writing verse on Tommy Pai Not him, whose energetic mind, Explain'd the rights of all mankin But-why recoil, my litte muse, Why thus to me your aid refuse? You are correct;' tis all in vain To write on thicmes of useless Pain Then halt, Pegasus, let him pass, My muse forbids you-kick an $* * *$, Elegy on the DEATH OF LORD BYRON. Rear high thy bleak majestic hills
And, Epreadid, pour thy thousand And, England
And wave thy heaths with blossoms red. But ah! what poet now shall tread Thy airy heights, thy wide domain; Since he, the sweetest bard, is dead That ever breath'd the soothing strain.
Hang your harps o'er the waters t weep,
The sweetest of poets is dead!
He slumbers in death's silentste And the cypress waves over his Drop, ye willows
All nature in sadness appear; All nature in sadness appear;
Let the moon be enveltop halo be dimg dimm docm with a tear

The bard who so late strung his lyre
The cold urn shall wrap in its breast;
The bosom which love did inspire
Eternity points toits rest!
Eternity points toits rest Enraptur'd, shall dwell on his

The abundance of capital England is such, that is seeking employment in any manner that promises io yield even a moderate interest. The natural consequence is that many projects are devised, and companies formed for carrying them into execution, which are mere traps for the money of those who for the money of those who have more capital than they have more capital than they know what to do with. By and by, say the London editors they will, one after another, explode, leaving in the hands of the last holders of the stocks a "beggarsuch an extent does this mania rage in England at present, that it is said even to exceed in extravagance, that of the extravagance, that of the famous South Sea schemé, and to promise a termination scarcely less ruinous.
The same scene, on a smaller scale, is now exhibited in our

The Editor of the New York Evening Post, among other papers, successfully exposes the speculations in which these prowhich they lead. "There is no (says he) employment for the fictitious capital already created and when the new batch of in ext assuredly will be, the fabric cannot bear its own weight, and nusst tumble." We apprehęnd that the danger is of a differen nature from this, but equally to be deprecated. There is no knowing, until it is tried how ponderous the "fabric" which he prodigious resources of that ity and state will bear, nor th accumulation of misery and inequality of condition which will ollow the establishment of so vast a moneyed aristocracy

"In our country, the highest man is not above the people. If ditional protection, they have not additional power; nor does wealth here form a permanent who are wealthy to day, pass to he tomb, and their children diide their estates. Property ide their estates. Property No family can, without its own exertions, stand erect a long time, under our statute of descents and distributions, the only rue and legitimate agrarian law. It silently and quietly dissolves the mass heaped up by the toil and diligence of a long life of enterprize and industry. Property is continually changing
