A QUIET WEDDING.

Harper, of Smithfield, N. C., officiated. Only a few intimate friends of the bride and the family were present.

"A Noble Outcast."

This is the striking title of the pleasing drama which was beautifully and skillfully presented at the Opera House here last Tuesday evening by the Amateur Dramatic Club of Scotland Neck. It was a happy selection and thoroughly pleasing and interesting through out. The delightful and masterly rendition of every part was charming and indicative of the manner in which these clever neighbors all ways successfully execute their undertaking of whatever nature.

Rendered by home talent entirely, it was not only worthy of these accomplished and enterprising neighbors, but would have done credit to experienced dramatists. The performance was under the excellent management of Mrs. W. A. Bean, which of itself bespeaks the marked success which characterized the event of the event of its presentation here.

Those taking part in the play were: E. T. Whitehead, as Gerard Weston, (known as Jerry the tramp) who played the part of the tramp, the escaped convict and finally the newly discovered father of France, in an amusing and pathetic manner and kept the audience in a state of mingled smiles and tears. Mr. Will Jones played the part of Col Lee, a Southern Banker, and foster father of France Lee, and did his part well. As James Blackburn, nephew of Col Lee, L. O. Mcintosh played the hypocrite and villain to perfection in attempting to execute his diabolical scheme to tear away France.
