Dick: I say, isn't a dollar a good deal of money to pay for a quart of whiskey?
Harry: It never struck me that way. On the contrary, it has always seemed to me that it is too bad that you only get a quart for a dollar.—Boston Transcript.

Washington, 6—Commissioner Yerkes of the internal revenue bureau, has received from Atlanta Ga., the smallest moonshiner distillery ever captured by revenue officials. Not only was the whiskey outfit captured but the man who owned and operated it was taken into custody at the same time.

The moonshiner and his paraphernalia were arrested at Grant Park, Atlanta, a few days ago, in sight of the monument to General McPherson, and near the soldiers' home. The operations of the moonshiner were the most unique in the history of the internal revenue office here as a souvenir.

The still in which mash for the whiskey was boiled was an ordinary quart milk can. The moonshiner, who evidently was an old hand at the business, had then secured an old gallon can in which prepared paint had formerly had its home. With these two vessels, he secured a small copper worm, as it is called, connected it by means of a cap and then ran it through the gallon can. In this simple form the moonshiner had a complete, though crude, outfit for making corn whiskey.

He carried his distillery in a large valise, and in the valise he also had the grain mash in bottles. On meeting the thirsty Georgian who wanted a drink of moonshine, the moonshiner would make off into the nearby bushes, set up his little distillery, put a fire under the quart can, and in a short time turn out as many drinks as his customer wanted.

The mash, as stated, is placed in the still with a fire under it. The vapor therefrom goes on through the copper worm, which is coiled a number of times. This coil of copper passed through the paint can in which cold water had been placed. Immediately upon the vapor coming in contact with the cold water it condensed and became spirits.

Cases have been known frequently in the South where such little distilleries were operated in the homes of moonshiners and also among the mountaineers serving terms in federal prisons for violating the internal revenue laws and other offenses, but never before, so far as the record is known, has a moonshiner ever attempted to carry such an outfit around with him but,

After all, patience is about the highest form of politeness. The hand of fortune often looks suspiciously like four aces. Some folk seem to think that to forgive is human and to err is divine.

A woman seldom believes anything her husband says about her, but she believes every word he says about other women.—Ex.

"She—"Do you think we can get along without that cook dear?" "Sure. Why, if the worst comes, you can do the cooking and I can get my meals at a restaurant."—Life.

The Irish courts have invented a new punishment for recalcitrant husbands, which consists in requiring an abject apology in the public prints. The following is a sample:
"Apology. I make a humble apology to my wife and family for my past conduct, which was cruel. I beg to say that what I stated in court was untrue and want this to be printed."

A SAD DISAPPOINTMENT.
Ineffective liver medicine is a disappointment, but you don't want to purge, strain and break the glands of the stomach and bowels. DeWitt's Little Early Risers never disappoint. They cleanse the system of all poison and peevish matter and do it so gently that one enjoys the pleasant effects. They are a tonic to the liver. Cure biliousness, torpid liver and peevish fever. S. B. Biggs

The Busy Bee.
Every head of clover consists of about sixty flower tubes, each of which contains an infinitesimal quantity of sugar. Bees will often visit 100 different heads of clover before retiring to the hive, and in order to obtain the sugar necessary for a load must therefore thrust their tongues into about 6,000 different flowers. A bee will take twenty trips a day when the clover patch is convenient to the hive and thus will draw the sugar from 120,000 different flowers in the course of a single day's work.

The complete shading of the soil rapidly enriches it, even without the application of manure. It may be that, shading causes a deposit of nitrogen from the air; every farmer knows that wherever a stack of hay or straw has stood for several months the ground underneath is not only enriched, but grows much darker in color. Any one may try an experiment as follows: Select the poorest spot of ground on the farm, lay over a strip of any length, but about a yard wide, a few inches of straw, and cover with a board, or, if preferred lay only a board on the ground. If the place is seeded to something after the covering is removed the difference in growth between the portion previously shaded and that not shaded will be very marked.

NOT DOOMED FOR LIFE.
"I was treated for three years by good doctors," writes W. A. Greer, McConnellsville, O., "for piles, and fistula, but when all failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me in two weeks." Cures burns, bruises, cuts, corns, sores, eruptions, salt rheum, piles or no pay. 25c at all drug stores.
