DRESS FOR SERVANTS.

What Maids Should Wear In a Conducted House.

The appearance of the servants show ial standard of the household. If the maids are untily and slipshod It is usually the fault of the mistre During the morning, when the hard work is being done, all the maids should wear wash dresses, preferably dark blue and white. These dresses should be plainly made and on no ac count should the skirts touch the ground. A white turndow linen col-lar and linen cuffs, togethe with a triungular cap, complete the morning cos tume. In the afternoon a plain black hlpaca or wool gown is the correct this should be worn an apron of fine lawn, prettily trim-med, and a flufmed, and a fluf-ry cap. Starched linen collars and cuffs are also necessary. The children's nurse may wear the same style of cotton gown as the other maids, with the addition of a long plain white apron made with a high bib. Her cap is larger than that of for street wear she pins to it a AFTERNOON COSTUME. large Alsatian bow, with streamers reaching far down in the back. Her street gown in winter is black and in bther white material.

The cook's cap is sufficiently large to completely cover her hair. She has also a white apron of butchers' linen the length of her skirt and reaching completely around her.

The lady's maid should wear a soft dress of black material. Her apron is a dainty French affair, with a large pocket. Around her neck a soft lawn silk or lace neckband is allowable. When the maid accompanies her mis-tress shopping, she wears a plain tatlor made dress, with nothing to indicate her position.

The mistress should always insist on neatness of appearance, on the maid's hair being properly brushed and the caps and aprons being scrupulously clean. BEATRICE MILLER.

For the amount of meat used the sausage is the most profitable legacy of the hog. Fully fifty different kinds of this suspected article are manufactured to suit the taste of many peoples—for Italians, with a dominanting measure of garlic; for Germans, hard and fatty; for Frenchmen, dry and well-larded; for Americans, well spiced, and all of these in several grades. Whatever meat cannot be used otherwise is consigned to the sausage, although for no other reason than that every diminutive piece is available—ham, head and foot trimmings and the odd remnants from the butcher's block. Potato, flour, spices and water are odd remnants from the butcher's block. Potnto, flour, spices and water are mixed with the meet, which has been finely chopped by rocking knives, and a steem driven piston forces the mass into the casings, whereupon it becomes sausage. The casings are the intestines of the bog, thoroughly scraped and washed by mechanical process. The pig's snout does not escape—that would be a gross oversight—so it is trimmed off and sold as a pickling "delicacy" to new Americans with unpronounceable names.—Century.

A young recruit was set on sentry go and was, of course, new to his duty. A good natured comrade brought him a sandwich, and the recruit was about to eat it when the major appeared. As the officer was in mufti the sentry did not recognise him and did not salute. The major took in the situation and

"No; I'm not." "His groom perhaps?"
"No; try again."

"No; try again,"
"Terhaps the old chap himself?"
"Right this time," said the major.
"Oh, good gracious!" exclaimed the frightend sentry. "Hold the sandwich while I present arms!"—London An-is!"-Youth's Companion. Origin of "Watered Stock." The expression "watered stock, which describes so well the expansion of the stock of a company beyond the value of the property, originated, it is said, in connection with Daniel Drew who was once the wealthiest and most unique manipulator in Wall street. Drew had been a drover in his younged days, and it was said of him that be fore selling his cattle in the market he would first give them large quantitie would have give them large quantities of sait to make them thirsty and then provide them with all the water they could drink. In this way their weight was greatly increased, and the purchaser was buying "watered stock."—Lesile's Weekly.
