WILLIAMSTON, N. C., FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1904.

WHOLE NO. 249

RALEIGH LETTER.

July 11, 1904.

One of the locally interesting incidents of the Democratic National Convention, which completed its work Saturday evening, is the report that reaches this Bureau that the following wireless telegraph message, punctuated with liquid air, was entrusted to a carrier-pigeon but has not yet been delivered, owing to St. Louis messenger boy's mistake, probably:

St. Louis, July 6.

Judge Tompkins H. Raleigh, N. C.: Re-elected National Committeeman Many thanks. Would probably have been re-elected, any way; but your timely aid helped me to make it unanimous. Can never sufficiently thank you, thank you, thank you.

Well, we are all Parker men now, Mr. W. J. Bryson included, and, with all factions of the Democratic party pulling together for the election of the Democratic nominee, we have good reason to hope for his election, and the defeat of the "broncho buster"—which is the main object after all.

Although Judge Parker is so little known among the masses, the wisdom of his nomination must be admitted when the overwhelming vote he received on the first ballot is considered—469 out of a total of 539, Hearst receiving 190. The additional fact that only about half of them had been instructed for him clearly proves that the leaders of the party all over the country became convinced in the belief, after reaching St. Louis, that he was the most available man. Otherwise he could not have been nominated; for there was plenty of time and there were enough unpledged voters to have defeated him if it had been advisable to do so.

Of course Parker will receive the electoral votes of all the Southern States, and the only question is whether he can carry New York and secure enough votes to accomplish his election.

Judge Parker will soon be called upon to break the silence which has characterized his attitude, and his forthcoming letter of acceptance will be awaited with more interest than that of any other nominee in many years. What he said Saturday on the question of finance and currency will be especially interesting and important, and will necessarily greatly affect his candidacy, especially in New York and the East.

The silence of the platform (adopted after a long and hard struggle between the opposing elements on the committee) on the money question evidently did not meet the approval of Judge Parker and caused him to send a telegram to Mr. Sheehan (one of the managers of his campaign) at St. Louis, in which he says:

"I regard the gold standard firmly and irrevocably established, and shall act accordingly if the action of the convention of to-day shall be ratified by the people. As the platform is silent on the subject my views should be known to the majority. I request you to decline the nomination for me, so that another man may be nominated before adjournment."

That dispatch was a corser and will really be more effective with the "business interests" of the country than if an out-and-out gold plank had been incorporated in the platform. It has a genuine Grover Cleveland ring, and at once settles the fact that Parker is a "dodger."

On motion of John Sharp Williams the convention authorized Mr. Sheehan to send the following reply to Judge Parker:

"The platform adopted is silent upon the question of the monetary standard because it is not regarded by us as a possible issue in the campaign, and only campaign issues are mentioned in the platform. Therefore, there is nothing in the views expressed by you in the telegram just received which would preclude a man entertaining them from accepting a nomination on and platform." The vote on the motion to send the above answers was 774 ayes to 181 nays.

Ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, was then nominated for Vice-president on the first ballot, receiving 654 votes to 323 divided between John Sharp Williams, Turner and Harris.

The new National Committee will meet in New York on a date to be fixed. The selection of a new chairman of the National Committee will, of course, depend largely upon the wishes of Judge Parker, if he shall express a personal preference. It is generally conceded, however, that Senator Gorman (who was chairman when Mr. Cleveland was elected in 1884, and who is generally recognized as the ablest political manager in this country) will be asked to accept again this very important and responsible position. Whether he can be prevailed upon to do so or not is at present not known.

Prominent Democratic leaders and State officials here express themselves as pleased at the nomination of Judge Parker. Gov. Aycock said: "Judge Parker is in all respects an admirable man to be made President. He is a true Democrat, and if his candidacy does not create enthusiasm it does satisfy the judgment of the voters. He will grow in the confidence of the people as the campaign progresses, and I believe he will be elected. The people want a faithful servant, and not a dictatorial master, in the White House at Washington."

Death at Goose Nest

[Special]

The sad death of Mr. W. T. Casper was quite a shock to this community. Mr. Casper came from Bertie county six years ago and located at our town. He was a leading member of the Missionary Baptist Church and took much interest in the good work, thus making a host of friends in and out of the church.

Mr. Casper for several years had been in bad health and some times complained of palpitation of the heart, and much to the grief of his children. He was not satisfied unless at work. He often remarked that his happiest moments was behind the plow in prayer with his Jesus.

On Thursday morning, July 7th, Mr. Casper ate a hearty breakfast and seemed to be well except a slight headache; he went to his work as usual, and about 8 o'clock went to the watermelon patch with his wife, and soon after he went to a tenant's house to carry a cotton blossom, and drank a few swallows of water, then he walked back to his plow where he was found by Mr. J. J. Lang, lying on his face. He called for help and when they turned him over he brought two breaths and died; this was about nine o'clock. He leaves a beloved wife and nine children and several brothers, all of whom have our greatest sympathy.

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Ten Years of Suffering

"I wish to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Mrs. Mattie Burge, of Martinsville, Va. "I suffered from chronic diarrhoea for ten years and during that time tried various medicines without obtaining any permanent relief. Last summer one of my children was taken with cholera morbus and I procured a bottle of this remedy. Only two doses were required to give her entire relief. I then decided to try the medicine myself, and did not use all of one bottle before I was well and I have never since been troubled with that complaint. One cannot say too much in favor of that wonderful medicine." This remedy is for sale by S. R. Biggs.

It is a beautiful party harmony that will cause the lions and lambs to lie down together, as was done at St. Louis.—Atlanta Constitution.

Anderson, Crawford & Co

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. It is pleasant, palatable and strengthening.

"Fairbanks is as tall as Lincoln was," remarks The Buffalo Evening News. This, it is superfluous to say, is a purely physical reference.—Atlanta Constitution.

"Say, pa," quired little Billy Bloomer, "what's an echo?"

"An echo, my son," replied the old man with a sigh long drawn out, "is the only thing that can flumm a woman out of the last word."—The Lyre.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

NEATNESS AND CLEANLINESS BRING GROWTH AND PROSPERITY.

Well Kept Public Thoroughfares and Residences Are a Splendid Advertisement For a Community—A Pointer For Householders.

Neatness and cleanliness are evidences of the highest civilization, refinement and culture, while slovenliness is offensive to good taste and repugnant to all ideas of correct conduct, whether it be in respect to personal appearance or surroundings, says the San Antonio Express.

A dress suit with soiled linen or with unpollished pedal ornaments or a handsome gown with frayed trimmings or conspicuous grease spots is not more incongruous or displeasing to the eye than a splendid mansion with a dingy, dust and mud bespattered exterior and untidy surroundings.

Outward appearances are supposed to indicate inward conditions. If weeds grow rank in the yard, if the fence be ragged, the lawn unmowed and a general aspect of neglect permeates the place, while offensive odors emanate from some part of the premises, one would not expect to find neatness and cleanliness within.

A modest little cottage that is neatly painted, set in a frame of height and attractive surroundings, opens for more in the estimation than a splendid mansion and spacious grounds which evidence no acquaintance with the scrubbing brush or the pruning knife of care and orderly arrangement.

It is not essential that one should be rich in order to be neat and cleanly. It does not follow that one must be slovenly and dirty because not rich.

The poet has said that "in the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." That fancy and that love are for the beautiful. The object of the young man's affection strives to make herself pleasing, attractive, fascinating, and the young man, on his part, does the same. He puts on his best bib and tucker, brushes his hair and his boots and elevates himself in his own esteem through his attractive adornment.

What is the good of having a costly dwelling that you can't get into and out of without wading through mud and slush or running the risk of mishap on a shakeling sidewalk? Why not spend some of the money on a shirt, collar and necktie instead of putting it all in a silk hat? What is the good of having flowers if they are to be overrun and hidden by rank, noxious weeds? Why not clean up and beautify the whole town and keep it clean, attractive and inviting? It is not fine houses or pretentious architecture, but cleanliness, neatness and order, that make the town beautiful and attract desirable residents.

An Active Health Board, of Montclair, N. J., should make that place a very healthy one, to judge from the report of what has been done during the past year, says the Municipal Journal and Engineer.

The board keeps track of the quality of ice supplied to citizens, testing samples from time to time to prevent sale of impure product. It carefully guards the milk supply by testing samples supplied by each dealer as often times as to the anti-tuberculosis of the liquid, its purity and the amount of bacteria per cubic centimeter. In its report the board points the results of the tests of each dealer's supply, giving the man's name and passes judgment on the general character as shown by the tests and its knowledge of the source of supply. It does not hesitate to condemn supplies that are not good or warn citizens against them.

It is this publicity that will do more than anything else to make the purity of the milk supply. Frequent bottling of persons taken with contagious diseases and thorough disinfection prevented the spread of these diseases. Long and persistent efforts finally traced the source of a typhoid outbreak to one milk dealer's supply, where carelessness on the part of the dealer in sterilizing bottles and apparatus resulted in a large number of cases of this disease and the ruin of the dealer's business.

An Enterprising Town. Out of 200 shade trees set out in a Pennsylvania town last fall 105 of them are in leaf this summer and certain to grow and thrive. The money value of those trees can hardly be estimated, and the enterprise of the planters is commendable.

"We're in the fashion for once." "How's dat?" "The paper I'm readin' says th' new style of shoes has ventilated toes."

"I broke mamma's hand mirror yesterday." "Oh, that's such bad luck!" "I know it. I got an awful whipping for it."

Listen—If we were to meet a ferocious bull, dear, what would you do? "Percy—What a question to ask! Don't you know I was champion long distance runner at school?"

He—She doesn't like me. I attempted to kiss her once. She—How foolish of you! Why didn't you attempt to kiss her twice?

No Uncertainty at All. "She is a girl of uncertain age, I believe." "No; she's been the same age for the last ten years."
