SPARE ROD, SPOIL CHILD.

How Children Were Raised in Olden Days.

After a long drouth we are having refreshing showers. They not only revive vegetation, but manhood as well. During a drouth every thinking man tightens his grip on his purse. After the long drouth of 1845 my grandfather sent his horses to east Tennessee to winter, but now if one section of this great Union fails to make a crop, the mighty moguls that plough through the bowels of the earth from Maine to California, bring bread, the staff of life, to every man's door.

Our legislature, back in the '50's, passed a law against dueling in North Carolina, to stop the flow of blood in time of peace, but it does not seem to have much effect these days. The smoke of Ernest Hayward's revolver had hardly blown away from killing poor Ludlow Skinner, before another man is shot down in the city of Raleigh. Not many months ago a kind mother in Pineville asked the mayor of that town to adopt the curfew law, to drive the boys home at 9 o'clock. I think the mothers of Raleigh had better get their mayor to ring the curfew bell at sunset to keep their girls at home.

Israel Helms, Mike Osborne and Archie McLarty asked for no curfew bell to raise their families by. They used the prescription laid down in holy writ, "Spare the rod and spoil the child." I was once at Howard's Mill. Little Sam Howard, of Vance township, (now deceased) was the miller. A young man stepped in and asked me to play a game of cards. I asked to be excused, for I did not know one card from another. He then asked Sam. He shook his head and said it made his flesh crawl to see a deck of cards. He said one of his school-mates came home with him once, and after supper they retired to the cook house and in there his friend was giving him his first lesson in card playing. Some one knocked at the door, and who should come in but his mother! She took him by the hand, led him around the house, jerked down a peach tree limb—and ever after a deck of cards and a peach tree limb flew to his brain at once. No doubt that good old mother helped Sam to go to heaven. History tells us that the father of Martin Luther was accustomed to inflict on him cruel chastisement and his mother whip him until the blood came for a mere trifle. Such was the general system of family government in those days. There is no man recorded in the pages of history who did more for the reformation of the church of Christ than Martin Luther. Not many years ago a prominent clergyman visited the North Carolina penitentiary and asked an old convict what was the first step of his downfall. He said, "Breaking the Sabbath day." You find a man today who keeps the Sabbath day holy in his family, and you seldom see his children in stripes or behind prison bars.—Correspondence in Monroe Journal.

Yours, Mine, and Ours.
A western paper tells a story of a mixed brood of children which reveals the confusion liable to exist in certain families.
A widower and a widow, each having children, married, and children were subsequently born to them. The parents agreed much better than the children did. One day a neighbor, going past their place, heard a commotion within out of which rose the voice of the wife, screaming to the husband.
"Jim! Jim! Hurry out in the yard! Your children and my children are beating the lives out of our children!"
The most pleasant and positive cure for indigestion, heartburn and all stomach troubles is Ring's Dyspepsia Tablets. They aid digestion, tone and strengthen the stomach. "Sold by All Dealers."

His Idea of Good Samaritan.

It was in the Rocky Mountains of Wyoming, several miles north of Laramie. A visitor was called on to teach a class of boys whose ages varied from 7 to 10. The lesson of the Sunday before had been about the Good Samaritan.
"Now," said the teacher, "which of you boys can tell me about the lesson for last Sunday."
Several hands went up. One of the boys was selected. "Tell all you know about it," said the teacher.
"Well sir," said the boy, "the lesson for last Sunday was about the hold-up in Jericho canyon. Dere was a man travelin' and a gang of rougs got up wid 'im and walted 'im one and mighty nigh killed 'im. Then they touch him for his wad and scooted. Here come along a doctor. He said: 'Ugh dat aint none of my medicine, and went on. Here come along a preacher. He look at the fellow an say, 'Dat case aint in my parish,' and went on. Den here come along a cowboy on his broncho. He jump off and say, 'Hello, herdis fellow is hurt.' Den he put 'im on the broncho and carry 'im to the road house and say to the fellow: 'Now, here, dis fellow got into it down yonder in de canyon and got hurt. You take care of 'im. He's my pal and here's my wad, and if you are out anything when I get back from the ranch I'll square it.'—Selected.

Cathedral or Cottage.
"You've got education enough for the building trade, you'd better stick to your job. You'll waste time and money both going to college," said an employer to a young man whose services he wished to retain.
"Yes," said the young man, "but I want to be able to build cathedrals instead of cottages if the opportunity comes my way. I can only build cottages if I stay here. I must go to college."
This young man has definitely given up the prospect of present dollars for the purpose of qualifying himself for greater tasks. He is voluntarily relinquishing many of the things attractive to youth in the day of youth, for the purpose of achieving greater things. Our country needs men qualified for the great tasks, qualified morally, as well as mentally and physically.
It takes self-denial on the part of those who qualify, for the ability to meet and solve heavy problems cannot be won without self-denial. There is no royal road to the goal, but the fully equipped man will regret the years of self denial, for the cathedral will ever be more than the cottage.—East and West

A Lovers Ditto.
Many men able to write excellent business letters, fail lamentably when they attempt to compose anything else. The relatives of one such hampered person complained, not without reason, of the extreme brevity of his home letters.
"But," complained the offender, "you know very well I never could write much of a letter."
"You write long enough ones to your betrothed," asserted the aggrieved sister. "Sometimes she has to pay extra postage on them."
The engaged girl who was present laughed and blushed; then she rushed to the rescue.
"He just puts, 'I love you,' at the top of each page," she explained, and "fills all the space underneath with ditto marks."

BLUE COAT AND GRAY.

"If Thine Enemy Thirst, Give Him Drink."

In 1864 several Union and Confederate wounded soldiers lay in a farm house in the Shenandoah Valley. Mrs. B—, the mother of one of the latter, rode ten miles every day to see her boy, bringing such little comforts as she could. Her house was burned, the plantation ruins, trampled down by the army. One day she carried him some beef tea. Every drop was precious; for it was with great difficulty that she had obtained the beef from which it was made.
As she sat watching her boy sip the steaming, savory broth, her eye caught the eager, hungry look of the man on the next cot. He was a Yankee, perhaps one of the very band who had burned her home. She was a bitter secessionist. But she was also a noble-hearted, Christian woman. Her eye stole back to the pale, sunken face, and she remembered the words of the Master, "If thine enemy thirst, give him drink."
After a moment's pause, and with pressed lips, for it required all the moral force she could command, she filled the bowl with the broth and put it to his lips, repeating to herself the words, "For His sake; for His sake, I do it." Then she brought fresh water and bathed the soldier's face and hands as gently as if he, too, had been her son. The next day, when she returned, he was gone, having been exchanged to the north.

Last winter the son of a senator from a northern State brought home with him during the Christmas vacation, a young engineer from Virginia. He was the only living son of Mrs. B—, the boy whom she had nursed having been killed during the latter years of the war. She had struggled for years to educate this boy as a civil engineer, and had done it. But without influence he could not obtain a position, and supported himself by copying.
Senator Blank inquired into his qualifications, and finding them good, soon after secured his appointment on the staff of engineers employed to construct a certain railway. The senator enclosed with the appointment a letter to Mrs. B—, reminding her of the farm house on the Shenandoah, and adding, "I was the wounded man to whom you gave that bowl of broth."
The divine principle embodied in this act of the true-hearted southern mother was never better exemplified and the fruit of it, like those to every obedience to divine law, was a natural result and fulfillment of the promise that "Bread cast upon the waters shall be found after many days."—Selected.

Wedding Anniversaries.
The observance of a diamond wedding, when two people have traveled life's road together for seventy-five years, has occurred at rare intervals, and has been the subject of national interest. Sometimes the diamond wedding is celebrated after sixty years of married life. That is incorrect, still it does happen, as if the aged couple had small hopes of seeing the real diamond wedding.
The golden wedding, a celebration of fifty years' happiness, is so frequent an occurrence that it speaks well for American longevity and the domestic peace of our nation. The earlier celebrations—the silver wedding to commemorate twenty-five years of married life, the china wedding for twenty years, the crystal wedding for fifteen years, the tin wedding for ten years, and the wooden wedding for five years—are daily occurrences everywhere.

Following are the titles of other wedding anniversaries: First, cotton; second, paper; third, leather; seventh, woolen; twelfth, silk and fine linen; thirtieth, pearl, and fortieth, ruby.—Good Housekeeping.

Peaceful Spirit Gives Health.

Here is some good advice given by a beautiful woman to a girl admirer who asked her for her recipe for remaining "such an evergreen":
"Never work on till you are seemingly at your last gasp, whether at your business or your pleasure, but rest as you go along. If you forego rest until your work is done, the chances are that you will then be too tired to take it. Get all the beauty sleep you can. Remember that late hours are fatal to good looks and health, and don't commit the folly of working far into the night, and then wondering why your work is not done and you feel so good-for-nothing the next day.
"Shield your nerves, and don't let them become too sensitive. Make yourself take life calmly. If you lose a train, don't pace the platform wildly, but inquire when the next comes in, and sit down calmly to wait for it. That's just what most women don't do; they sit down, perhaps, but they tap the floor with their feet, cinch and uncinch their hands, and are apparently in a fever-heat of excitement over the arrival of every train that comes in, even though they have been assured that theirs is not due for another half hour. That half-hour of waiting means to them a frightful wear and tear of nerves, and they are practically weeks older for it. Try to cultivate calmness; but, if you cannot do that all at once, you can keep your face still."—London Family Herald.

The Simple Life.
Much has been said recently by President Roosevelt and others about the "Simple Life." It seems worth while to quote the following from a conspicuous advocate of it, a generation ago, R. W. Emerson:
"I pray you, O excellent wife, not to cumber yourself and me to get a rich dinner for this man or this woman who have alighted at our gate, or a bedchamber made ready at too great a cost. These things they can get for a dollar at any village.
"But let this stranger, if he will, in your looks, in your accent and behavior, read your heart and earnestness, your thought and will, which he cannot buy at any price in any village or city, and which he may well travel fifty miles and dine sparsely and sleep hard in order to behold.
"Certainly let the board be spread, and let the bed be dressed for the traveler; but let not the emphasis of hospitality lie in these things. Honor to the house where they are simple to the verge of hardship, so that the intellect is awake and reads the laws of the universe."—Selected.

WHAT DR. VAN DYKE SAYS

The Quality in Which Woman Should Excel.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke discussing "The Way to Womanhood" in a series of papers in Harper's Bazar, thus voices his personal views on the subject:
"It seems to me," he says, "that woman's excellence (and I have been using the word always in its proper meaning to denote superiority), lies in three things—a certain fineness and delicacy of physical organization and balance; a certain deep and sensitive power of intellectual and moral sympathy, and a certain firm and gentle faculty of social order and rule. I believe that nature gives the germ and potency of these things, to her more fully and more richly than to man at the beginning of life. They fit and adorn a woman for the place and the privileges which belong to her civilized society. And the course of life the method of training and education which develops these things in a girl is the way to womanhood."
Dr. Van Dyke thinks "for most girls the true purpose and the best result of education is not the mastery of some special branch nor the acquisition of the encyclopedia of learning, but the training of the intelligence and the quickening of the imagination, so that they shall be able to comprehend more clearly and to sympathize more deeply.
"They are not going to be inventors or discoverers, or lawyers, or philosophers, or chemists, or theologians—at least not in the majority of cases. They are going to be women; and that means that they will have a special need and use for the power of thinking in companionship. The man who is intellectual, who has some hard work of brains to do, or who engaged with some knotty problem of knowledge, does not want a woman to take the place of a lexicon or a library of scientific reference; he wants her to be a friend to his laboring, and often bewildered and weary mind; he wants her to see the meaning of his effort and to encourage and enlighten it by her sympathy. And the man who is dull and stupid does not want a scornful critic on the hearth, or a professor in skirts beside him; he waits, or at all events he needs, the bright comradship of a more thoroughly woman, who will gently surprise him out of his dullness and refresh his starved intelligence with the fruits of her thinking and reading—not in the form of solid chunks of information, but in the fine cordial or distilled wisdom."

The original is always the best—imitations are cheap. Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar is the original Laxative Cough Syrup. It is different from all others—it is better than all others, because it cures all coughs and colds and leaves the system stronger than before. The letter B in red is on every package.
