Interested in Roads

A large delegation of citizens representing the progressive spirit of our sister town, motored here from Washington Thursday to examine our good roads. The party was in real earnest about the road condition in Beaufort County and are endeavoring to do something to improve their system; as is always the case in every movement for good they have ignorance and prejudice to overcome, and they are trying to make no mistake by beginning right. (But you had better start wrong than not at all, Brethren).

Martin County people feel much interest in the roads of Beaufort as we do an immense amount of trade with her people, and we wish them every success in their movement.

The party was composed of the following gentlemen principally from Washington, who are willing to share the burden of road-building with their farmer friends:

Frank H. Rollins, M. T. Archibald, R. R. Warren, John Havens, W. H. Ellison, C. M. Little, A. J. Cox, Wilson Russ, J. K. Hoyt, F. J. Berry, J. J. Hodges, Caleb Bell, A. L. Hathaway, D. W. Bell, Capt. G. T. Leach, C. H. Sterling, Geo. Spencer, Sheriff Ricks, W. A. Chauncey, J. O. Swanner, Jim Jackson, John Hodges, Harry McMullin, Frank Bowers, Walter Cradle, J. L. Warren, Thad Sparrow, Jim Jackson, John Hodges, E. H. Jefferson, W. W. Leggett, Geo. Dale, W. R. Gibb, J. E. Mitchell, A. G. Leggett, Claude Carrow, Gilbert Rumley.

In the Good Old Days

The world is growing better. The student who familiarizes himself with the past, comparing political and social conditions of early times with those of the present day must admit this statement is true. "In the good old days," if analyzed means the youth of the one that makes the statement. In youth the imagination is more vivid and the knowledge of the wicked ways of mankind is limited. But as the youth grows to manhood he becomes more practical and less imaginative. He knows more about the faults of mankind and easily mistakes his increased knowledge for decreased moral standards. The following extract taken from a law passed by the British Parliament in 1670 is an interesting revelation of conditions in the "good old times."

"All women, of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids, or widows, that shall, from and after the passage of this Act, impose upon and betray into matrimony any of his Majesty's male subject, by scents, paints, cosmetics, washes, artificial teeth, false hair, spanish wool, iron siays, hoops, high-heeled shoes or bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the laws now in force against witchcraft, sorcery, and such like misdemeanors, and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void."

In Memoriam

John S. Brown, better known as "Jack," was the son of John Thomas and Martha E. Brown and was born on December 11th, 1877, near Robersonville, and died in Norfolk, Va., in St. Vincent's Hospital after an operation for appendicitis, on the 9th of July, 1913. He had been troubled with his disease in the Spring, but partially recovered, and hoped he would be free from it and regain his ordinary health; but after awhile it came back, and he went to the hospital, hoping to remain only a short while and return well and strong, but in this he and his friends were disappointed.

He was a man of few words and very quiet disposition. He was kind and obliging and thoroughly honest in his dealings with his fellow man. He had never connected with any church but had gone far enough when at Buies Creek to be received as a candidate for baptism, but for some reason he never went any farther. What his thoughts were and how well prepared he was for the change which was so soon to come, and how many prayers he offered to the good Lord for His blessing health and favor; and how these were answered only the unseen God knows. Let us learn this lesson, while young and in health, before the responsibilities of life weigh heavily upon us, is the time to seek and to serve the Lord. We know that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord, to them who are called according to His purpose."

We offer our condolence to his loved ones and pray that this bereavement may be the means under God in directing their thought and drawing their hearts unto Him "who is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind."

Our friend leaves two brothers, Robert B. and Walter A. and three sisters, Mrs. Sadie Ausbon, Miss Mamie Brown and Mrs. Mattie Moore to mourn their loss. On Friday afternoon at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Mattie Moore, in Williamston, the funeral services were conducted by Rev. Geo. J. Dowell and his mortal remains were carried to Brown Springs Cemetery and deposited in the earth there by his father and mother where together they await the morning of the resurrection.

Embroidery Club

Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Henry Crawford was hostess to the Embroidery Club at her home in East Williamston. The weather was stormy but many went in the rain which was decidedly refreshing after the long, dry spell. The hostess had arranged to entertain on the broad veranda where the shade of the magnificent beeches make it pleasant even in the warmest weather, but the storm prevented so the guests found enjoyment inside the home, where everything was conducive to the happiness of each one there. A delicious meal was served and the afternoon was delightfully spent.

Miss Sallie Bowen Dead

Sister Sallie Bowen died on the 10th day of July 1913, at the home of Mrs. J. Annie Wynn near Christian Chapel Church. She has done what she could. She never married but helped to raise many of her kindred, and was loved by Sister Wynn's whole family. She was faithful to her church and to her kin people. Sister Bowen was eighty-two years old when she died, and said she was ready to go. She was placed in the Wynn cemetery near the Church. There was a large crowd of friends and relatives at the funeral services.
