The Professor Says

The teaching spirit is like spirits of ammonia. When you once uncork it everybody recognizes and respects it.

It is strange how the folks will boast about the boundless resources of their counties, and yet allow them to be classed as pauper counties, when it comes time for school appropriations.

How is it that many folks who know so much can be so outrageously uninteresting, especially when they try to deliver a speech?

We often hear about the blind alley jobs. It is a disagreeable fact that there is too much blind alley teaching in our schools.
