

DAMS WILL PREVENT FLOODS

Catastrophe That Overwhelmed the City of Pueblo Can Be Avoided by Proper Action.

A disastrous flood occurs, causing a loss of many human lives and millions of dollars' worth of property. What happens next? What precautions are taken to prevent disaster?

Usually what happens is that the suffering community courageously undertakes the task of reconstruction. The flood is called an "act of God," and confidence is felt that there will be no repetition of the calamity.

But the conditions that gave rise to the disaster continue to exist, and such being the case, there is no assurance that it will not repeat itself.

If the catastrophe that overwhelmed the city of Pueblo is not to be repeated, again and yet again perhaps, preventive measures must be adopted. Dams must be built and reservoirs constructed at the headwaters of the Arkansas river to impound its floods.

The government reclamation service points out that floods not less destructive might occur in any year on the Rio Grande if the waters of that stream were not held in check by the great Elephant Butte dam.

The Elephant Butte dam is one of the greatest engineering works on the globe. It is 300 feet high nearly one-third of a mile long and creates the largest irrigation reservoir in the world.

Development of similar works on the headwaters of the Arkansas river would not only prevent future floods, but would store water for irrigating hundreds of thousands of acres, and furnish water power for all the manufacturing industries in that part of the country.

Heavy Outfit and Intense Heat Make Life Miserable for Sentries at Buckingham Palace.

A reporter of the London Daily News writing sketches of the heat wave is especially sorry for the sentries outside of Buckingham palace. Their plight, he writes, would have melted the heart of Mr. Winston Churchill could he have seen them.

In the full glare of the sun, clad in thick serge trousers, heavy scarlet tunics, with tight belts and bearskin bushes, the guardsmen stand perspiring and half stifled. Their outlook was upon a roadway stained with oil and reeking of petrol.

Small Clouds on Jupiter. Prof. W. L. Pickering in a recent address before the British Astronomical association, recalled the fact that during his observations at Arequipa he noticed that the surface of Jupiter instead of being composed of uniform bands of yellowish white or brown, really consisted of an enormous number of extremely minute reddish brown clouds upon a perfectly white background.

The routine of a naval establishment gives an unusual amount of life to the pine of the island of Guam. Every morning at 8 o'clock the full band assembles before the palace and the band leaders of the two flag staffs are mounted by marches. Promptly at the first stroke of "Eight bells," the band plays the "Star Spangled Banner," and the national flag and the Union Jack are hoisted up, while everyone in a slight and heaving stands at attention.

THE OMNIPRESENT REPORTER

American newspapers are spending considerably more on their service abroad than for parallel service in America. Who knows better, the things Americans are interested in than the managing editors who authorize this? Any event of more than local interest in Europe calls the American journalists to the spot.

For example, one morning at 10 o'clock in London, I strolled into a British labor congress. I met there six American newspapermen and but three or four British. Let any trouble start in Ireland and every New York paper will have its man on the scene inside of twelve hours, if he is not there already.

There was a surprise in the form of a knockout. The crowd went wild. Alice cheered and cheered. After a time she and Ben pushed their way through the crowd to the street.

EVIDENTLY HER LUCKY DAY. Girl at First Thought Pickpocket Was Busy, but It Turned Out Just the Other Way. The business girl, straphanging in the subway at the rush hour, felt a gentle tug on the pocket of her raincoat. Far from being disturbed, she grinned sardonically, knowing that just exactly one dime rested in that shabby little purse resting in that particular pocket. She was so humbled in by fellow travelers that it was difficult to discover if her suspicions were facts until she emerged with the struggling mass at her station. Then she dipped her hand lightly into the pocket only to find the ancient purse intact and in its accustomed spot. But that wasn't the only thing in the pocket. Extracting a hard substance gingerly, she stared in a daze at a roll of bills protected by an elastic band. Exhilarated and excited over this reverse state of affairs, she counted her ill-gotten gains and behold, she was the richer by 30 perfectly good dollars. Whether a fellow passenger had dropped them by mistake into her pocket instead of his own or a thief placed them there for fear of detection affords a wide field of speculation. Anyhow the business girl has coughed the money into the college campaign fund and hopes it will not be refused as tainted money.—New York Sun.
