"THE FORD MAN"

HER AFTERNOON QUITE BUSY

Violet Grace, However, Had Intervals of Leisure, and Took Advantage of All of Them.

Violet Grace dressed to go shopping. Last of all she powdered her nose. She went first to a certain store for it was having a sale, but she didn't see a bargain in the whole store, so she left. She paused a moment at the ribbon counter and powdered her nose.

She stopped at the blouse shop. She simply had to have a blouse soon. But they had nothing that appealed to her, so after powdering her nose she went out.

She visited the baby shop to see if she could find a little gift for Candice's baby, but everything was so frightfully expensive that she decided to make something to give. She powdered her nose at the doorway. There was such a good mirror there.

Feeling weary, she had a cup of chocolate and some wafers. The chocolate was not very hot and the whipped cream looked nippy. She resolved she would go somewhere else next time. Those tea shops deteriorated so after they had established a reputation. She powdered her nose before leaving the table.

It was early to go home, so she thought she might as well see a picture. She was disappointed in it, however, and she went out before it was altogether finished. She powdered her nose again in the rest room.

She boarded a street car for home. She wished she did not have to walk two blocks when she got off, but there was no help for it. She powdered her nose and alighted.

The afternoon was over—Katherine Negley, in Judge.

WELL, IT LOOKED SUSPICIOUS

But What Prohibition Officers Thought Was a "Still" Was Really Something Quite Different.

State and federal prohibition officers were silent concerning a recent experience, when they swooped down on the shack of John Finn of Sheboarde mountain to raid what was supposed to be a gin still.

Finn, a Russian, was nowhere to be seen, but at the rear of his clearing was a rough, conical stone structure, about six feet high, its chinks filled with clay. Under it drizzled a log fire, while from its top issued smoke and steam.

One still hunter pried open the small door, thrust a hand into the steam-filled interior and emitted a whistle.

"A 'big'!" he cried. "A human 'big'! And it's alive!"

From the doorway emerged first the feet, next the "big," and then body of John Finn, clad only in the muddy mantle of innocence.

"What's doin'?" was fired at him, "What's doin'?" he answered in broken English.

Taste is a matter of tobacco quality

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield are of finer quality (and hence of better taste) than in any other cigarette at the price.
