The most important phase of education being advanced in our State today is North Carolina Rural Life. For many years there has been a wide breach between the view point of the city and the rural citizen, in fact in some cases or instances, it has reached the point that the care of one for the other has greatly diminished. The things we study and the things we think will make all men of all stations see things in the light of the truth, if those studies are on the high plain of unselfishness and one common nation and country for all of us.

The rural districts is the base of wealth for the world. It is the cold waters far beyond the Grand Banks that makes the rich New England fisheries. It is the cans fields and swamp rushes of the Orient that make the big trade on hundreds of valuable articles that are manufactured and used in our great centers.

Our great sugar industries have been built on the product most largely raised by what we call inferior rural people. And regardless of what we may think of these things it seems to have been especially designed that we should have to be dependent upon those that we are inclined to call the weak.

The Department of Rural Life at our own State College under the direction of Dr. Carl C. Taylor is undertaking the task of developing rural living and training until life in that sphere will produce as many smiles as the life among the wealthy and leisure classes. When this great task is accomplished and every citizen of North Carolina is made to feel that he is a part of the great building of North Carolina's progress, moral and social development, then will North Carolina be the greatest and grandest old State in the world.

A study of rural life will make most of us think more of the other fellow an less of ourselves when we see the spirit of toilers as they endure all kinds of hardships and privations. When we see their souls laid bare we find there love, sympathy and kindness and are usually more ready to sacrifice their possessions and themselves for a neighbor's needs than the more wealthy and high up.

Instead of the great greed for money there should be a greater demand by the people for culture and for the care of the weaker class. The creation of wealth and the making of money has been badly overworked in the last generation. The fact is that we have nearly run wild on the subject. We are really batty on the subject and that is the reason for jokes. We do not live evenly balanced lives.

More knowledge of our neighbors will cause us to like them better. We will do more for them, and this is the reason that the State College is taking up this line of work; so that all the people may be educated and helped. The old idea of going to college to outstrip the other fellow should be changed. Each young man and woman should go to college with the idea of helping his country, his neighbor and himself.

The printer said he needed four more lines of type to fill out this column, so we did the best we could and this is the result!

HOME

(By Edgar A. Guest)

Home ain't a place that gold can buy - get up in a minute; Afore it's home there's got t' be a heap of living in it; Within the walls there's got t' be some babies born, and then Right there ye've got t' bring 'em up 'women good, and men; And graderly, as time goes on, ye find ye wouldn't part With anything they ever used - they've grown into yer heart; The old high chairs, the playthings, too, the little shoes they wore; Ye heard, an' if ye could ye'd keep the thumb marks on the door. Ye've got t' weep t' make it home, ye've got t' sit and sigh, And watch beside a loved one's bed, and know that Death is nigh; An' in the stillness of the night t' see Death's angel com, An's close the eyes o' her that smiled, an leave her sweet voice dumb. For these are scenes that grip the heart and when yer tears are dried, Ye find the home is dearer than it 'was, an' sanctified; O' her that was an' is no more - ye can't escape from it; Ye've got t' sing an' dance fer years, ye've got t' romp and play, An' learn t' love the things ye have by using 'em each day; Even the roses 'round the porch must blossom year by year Afore they 'come apart o' ye suggestin' someone dear Who used t' love 'em long ago an' trained 'em jest t' run, The way they do, so's they would get the early morning sun; Ye've got t' love each brick an' stone from cellar up to dome; It takes a heap o' living in a house t' make it home.

 Help You Choose Tires

500 miles at 94.48 miles an hour—a relentless grind over a rough-finished, sun-baked concrete and brick pavement at record-breaking speed—that is the gruelling test Oldfield Record Tires underwent successfully at Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. They were on the winner's car for the third successive year and on eight of the ten finishing in the money, upholding the confidence successful race drivers have in the trustworthiness and ability of these tires to meet the greatest demands of speed, endurance and safety. Their records in every other important race have been equally as good.

Consider this achievement along with another test of Oldfield quality made at Wichita, Kansas, this past winter and early spring.

34,525 miles on rutted, icy Kansas roads, running day and night on a Studebaker stock car without a single tire change. This test was made by a group of Wichita automotive dealers in a tire, oil and gasoline economy run. Mayor Kemp of Wichita was official observer and made affidavit to the mileage and service given by Oldfield tires.

You may never subject your tires to the gruelling experience of Indianapolis nor the steady grind of bad winter roads, but it is good to know you can get such safety and mileage economy by buying Oldfield tires. Ask your nearest dealer.

165% Increase in Business
 The buying public is the surest barometer of the value of any article. Their approval of Oldfield tires has been demonstrated by the increase of 165% in business for the first five months of 1922 over the corresponding period of 1921.

Agents Everywhere
 Oldfield Tires are distributed through 75 branches and distributing warehouses in all parts of the United States. More dealers are constantly becoming Oldfield agencies and Oldfield Tires are now available in your community.
