Editor Council, of J. F. Cromer in connection with Henry Ford as a possible candidate for President.

"Mr. Ford is not an issue, and never discuss anything but issues."

Mr. Ford may not be a candidate for President but a man who can give the people a period of twenty years' energy from a state of comparative poverty to the highest standard of accomplishment such a man, however obscure, will be worth anything even as a candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people and that we believe is the true aim of the people's vote.

AFTER THE MIDDLE CLASS, WHAT?

Dr. L. C. Branson, writing from Germany, declares that the middle-class farmers are being ruined, they have paid paper money for their goods, work animals, tools, and other things remain although value has departed from the mark. The fact is primarily as such as it ever was, and the season sure unchanged. The peasant has been paying for his goods in paper money that has almost worthless value for him, and in the same way, he has been in the oppressive army phrase, "living on the world."

We are all aware of the manner in which the great profiteers have taken advantage of the same situation. The "middle class" has been ruined, they have paid paper money for their goods, work animals, tools, and other things remain although value has departed from the mark. The fact is primarily as such as it ever was, and the season sure unchanged. The peasant has been paying for his goods in paper money that has almost worthless value for him, and in the same way, he has been in the oppressive army phrase, "living on the world."

We are in position, therefore, really to test for the first time the ancient theory that the middle class is the backbone of a nation. If that is true, Germany's backbone has been removed, and she must inevitably collapse. If Germany does not collapse then we must revise our theory as to the importance of a middle class in binding together and strengthening a commonwealth.

Germany has not collapsed so far, but then the wreck has only recently been made complete.

WHY MERCHANTS SHOULD ADVERTISE

The merchant, who saw a farmer coming from the express office a large package of goods bought from outside sources, had his eyes opened to the value of local advertising, reports the Goldsboro Record, which tells about the incident in an interesting way.

The Enterprise would like to see every merchant in Williamston to read this incident and think about it carefully until he fully understands the message given. The local merchant speaks the home paper to do all it can to build up the town, to advertise its possibilities and to be a real community leader. This the paper wants, and also will do whether it receives the full support of all those engaged in business or not. It is to the best interest of the community, however, that our local business men realize that a sign out on the highway cannot be brought to the home of a customer for him to read.

The Goldsboro Record says: A farmer who was carrying an express package from a city mail office, was accosted by a local merchant with the words: "Why do you buy that bill of goods from me?" he asked. "I could have saved you the express, and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and build up this community."

With characteristic frankness the farmer replied: "Why didn't you patronize my store? I read it and didn't know you had the goods. I have here, too, so I see your name in the paper, inviting me to come to your store."

Save the whey from the cottage cheese, use a small amount of lemon juice, sweeten to taste and serve as lemonade. No water is needed and when the drink is served with cracked ice, it is very refreshing, says Miss Flax Andrews of Robeson county.

A club member of Craven county walked and ran five miles to notify club members about the encampment when the mails were delayed. When the home agent came for them the children came barefooted and in their work clothes, just as they left the field, and the agent says, "You know I tried to make that meeting well worth while for those children."

Fifty-five Johnson county club girls paid their expenses to the Tri-county club encampment at Wilson by selling produce at the new produce market recently opened at Smithfield, reports Miss Minnie Lee Garrison, the home agent.

Your car and motor are balanced—the fuel should be, too

PRACTICALLY all the development and improvement in cars and in motors have been in the direction of finer and still finer balancing of parts, weights and stresses—to obtain greater and still greater flexibility. It is only natural that some car makers have succeeded better than others. Most gasolines today give you more flexible and versatile power than they did a few years ago. Here, too, it is natural that some refiners have succeeded better than others in their effort to produce a really balanced motor fuel. There's a long story of refining experience and study behind "Standard", the balanced gasoline. It is the logical fuel for any finely balanced motor. It gives you everything you need in a motor fuel. Stick to "Standard"—the all-round, balanced gasoline.
