OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD AS CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE

We quote below a clipping from the editorial columns of the Times-Union, Albany, N. Y., which says much in a few words regarding Senator Oscar W. Underwood's candidacy for the democratic nomination for president of the United States:

"Oscar W. Underwood has thrown his hat in the ring for the democratic presidential nomination. Underwood has the qualification, the ability and the experience to make an excellent president. He has proved his career in the house and the senate. No man in the country knows the workings, the needs, and problems of the United States today better than Oscar Underwood. To ability he adds courage and stability. His feet are always on earth, and his head is always cool. There is only one barrier in Underwood's way, and that is an obscure one. Every one of his opponents will quietly raise the fetter that Underwood comes from the south. But what if he does? Isn't the south a part of the United States? The Civil War was fought fifty years ago. Since then the south has fought two wars for the Stars and Stripes flag as well as the north, the east, and the west. It is about time to scratch that southern bugaboo. It could not better be killed off than by nominating Underwood. The convention is a year off, but, as things stand today, Underwood would make a mighty strong candidate."

WHAT IS HAPPENING WITH THE BOLL WEEVIL

"Undoubtedly much money has already been wasted in North Carolina this year in needless and ineffective attempts to combat the boll weevil. Time and time again we warned against this," says Franklin Sherman, chief in entomology for the State college and Department of Agriculture. "We advised against any extravagant outlay of money for machinery or poisons of whatever kind in the area where weevil injury was due to be light, yet we are told of persons who have used 'remedies' and now because their injury is light doubtless some think they have controlled the weevil; whereas, in fact, the weevil is equally scarce in other fields where no expense was incurred to protect from weevil."

Mr. Sherman states that in the region where injury was due to be severe this season advice was given to prepare for using the standard dust poison method and to follow the official advice, which is not to begin poisoning when the weevil first appears, but to wait until there is harmful damage in immediate prospect. A number of cotton farmers bought machines and poisons and dusted by directions with good prospect of success. There are others likewise equipped who have not yet applied one pound of poison because they haven't needed to and their investment is still safe.

But there are many others who thought they would go one better on the official advisers, states Mr. Sherman. These determined to use other forms of poison and to begin when the first weevils appeared. They have applied their poisons repeatedly for two months or more, and certainly killed some weevils, especially before squares formed, but it is known today that in many such fields there has been no real need of this expenditure, and that in other fields the weevil injury is increasing in spite of their "treatments."

"Weevil injury is not equal and alike in all fields," says Mr. Sherman. "He who thinks that he must adopt a certain 'remedy' into his practice and use it whatever happens, stands every chance of wasting money and effort. He who follows the standard official advice will prepare, and will apply the poison when it is needed and where it is needed. The one depends blindly on a yet questionable method, the other uses his judgment and knowledge in the timely application of a known method. There is a wide difference, and perhaps this difference will grow wider as we grow in our weevil experience."
