WINTER MILK DEPENDS UPON SUMMER CARE

It is a strange fact—but nevertheless a fact—that in summer, when cows really need the best care, they usually get the least.

Though many dairymen are not aware of it, a cow's condition during fall and winter depends almost entirely on the care and feed she gets in summer, and her milk production for the following year is influenced very largely by her diet during these months.

To produce the most during the winter months, when milk prices are highest, a cow must start the fall feeding season in good condition. If she has been for three or four months in the summer on a diet of pasture only she cannot possibly do it, though her milk yield may not reflect that fact immediately. For a while she will take milk off her back and put it in the pail, producing milk at the expense of flesh and condition.

Milking cows cannot get enough nourishment from grass at its best, but in the scorching heat of summer, with pastures drying up, they actually use up more physical energy grazing for feed than they get from the grass they eat. That is why many dairy authorities have made the flat statement that grass in midsummer is literally a starvation ration.

Heat and flies add their torment to this condition. A high producing cow is invariably a good feeder, but no cow can feed as she should if she is suffering from heat and spending half her time swatting flies.

Actual tests have showed that cows will produce better, not only during the summer, but more particularly through the following fall and winter, if they are kept in the barn all day and fed a reasonable amount of grain, than they will if they are allowed to graze all day during the hot weather.

It is, of course, desirable that dairymen take full advantage of good pasture, but the best practice is to keep the cows in a cool, comfortable barn during the heat of the day, with plenty of water always available, turning them out at night to graze and rest. Adding a reasonable, but regular, grain ration to grass throughout this season is a dairy practice that pays dividends. The amount of grain to be fed varies of course, with the amount of milk the individual cow produces, and to some extent with her breed. Dairymen can easily obtain advice as to the best schedule to follow from their feed dealer.

Hopkins' corner and running along J. W. Hopkins' line north 37 degrees 15' W. 390 feet to a black gum on the Jones road, thence along the center line of said road S. 45 degrees 8' W. 835 feet, S. 47 degrees 30' west 775 feet, S. 52 degrees 30' W. 180 feet and S. 62 degrees 30' W. 350 feet to a post, thence S. 60 degrees 30' W. 240 feet to a water oak in the head of Spring Branch, J. W. Hopkins' line approximately 2,975 feet to the center of the Foster Mill Pond, thence south of Speller's Branch, thence up the center of said Speller's Branch, N. R. Griffin's line, approximately 4,155 feet to the beginning, containing 120 acres, more or less.

CHILDREN'S ILLS

Arkansas Lady Says She Has Never Found a Better Laxative Than Theford's Black-Draught.

Mineral Springs, Ark.—"We use Black-Draught in our family of six children," says Mrs. C. E. Nutt, of this place, "and we find it a good bowel regulator. I give it to my children for colds and constipation, or any other stomach disorders, and it certainly is very helpful. I have never known it to fail them. Where there are so many children, it is a good idea to keep a laxative on hand, and Black-Draught is what we use."

"I have taken it myself for indigestion. I would feel dizzy, have gas and sour stomach. I would also feel a tightness in my chest. I took a good dose of Theford's Black-Draught when I felt that way and it would relieve me. I would feel better for days. My husband takes Black-Draught for biliousness. He says he has never found its equal. When he has the tired, heavy feeling, he takes Black-Draught night and morning for a few days and he doesn't complain any more. I sure do recommend Black-Draught." Sold everywhere. Get a package of Black-Draught, today Costs only one cent a dose. NC-175
