Let The Truth Be Known

Are we drifting into three wars without the right to inquire why? It seems that we are. We have our troops hovering over Nicaragua, Mexico, and China; and our State Department, backed by President Coolidge, refuses to permit Congress to inquire the reason why.

Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate, has repeatedly asked permission to inquire into these situations; every time to be told that the State Department would tell him as much as he needed to know; and now the administration cohorts refuse to permit him to go to Mexico. In the meantime we are rushing troops and ships to all of our fostered wars.

It is not considered patriotic to criticize one's government, but when men have to put in their money to make wars and have to spill their blood to win them, it seems that they should have a right to know just what principles they are defending in their fight. The rank and file of the American people would like to get near

Has Mercy Superseded Justice?

After all, American courts may be responsible for so many murders. We have 10,000 every year and only 200 punished; while England has only 100 and 98 punished.

If every man in this country respected the dignity of the courts and feared the certainty and severity of its punishments, we would have fewer killings. It seems to have become a perfect fad to beat the law and thwart the hands of justice; and society has to wade through blood to protect itself.

It is unsafe for a man to travel the highways with money on his person; it is dangerous for a lady to travel alone; and it is dangerous for a man to lie down in his castle for rest and sleep; his home may be burglarized or consumed by the torch from the fire-bug's hand.

Then, come to court, and money is too often the measure of justice; technicality follows technicality until justice yields up the ghost. Even after conviction by a jury the supreme court may find some error; and, if not,

Marriage Laws Need Revision

The old French style of having the parents to pass on the marriage of their children has never been popular in America, perhaps for the reason that we Americans are so smart. We do not have to get very old before we know it all—not even to the marriage age prescribed by law. It now seems that by the time an American girl gets old enough to climb out of the cradle, she feels competent to think for herself and act according to her own wishes.

This is one of the reasons for the rapidly increasing divorce evil. The rough-shod ride to the marriage altar by immature girls misses happiness oftener than it hits it. Some remedy should be provided to at least break pro immediately married a new woman. A few days later he was missing and several days later wife number two was found dead in a room adjoining the garage, the victim of her husband. He had killed one wife, was considered good enough to be granted a parole; worked for the paroling officer; got married, killed his second wife and ran away—all right here in North Carolina recently.

Mercy is a fine thing, but justice should not lose its senses from mere impulses of pity.

Until we believe in God and respect the law, crime will continue.

Things To Think About

By JAMES D. TAYLOR

BE JUST YOU

Whatever you do, if you do it sincerely, you do it quite differently than any one else. A school boy can not look over the shoulders of others and copy their work and make his grade successful. God has given eyes to see. We all have them, but no two see alike. You have a mind to interpret; so has your brother; and although both may think clean thoughts and have high purposes, your thoughts are different, and you can not express what you think in the same manner as your brother.

If you want to preach, you can not be a Sunday. If you aspire to write, you can not be a Stevenson. If you ever become President of your country, you will not be a Washington. You will be you. Just you.
