Women Would Vote Wisely

In order to enable women who this year to do their balloting more intelligently than ever before, thousands of women's clubs and study groups are planning to spend the next few months in definite courses of study on the problems of election choices and candidates. These groups of women have found a non-partisan service ready to hand in the good citizenship bureau of the Woman's Home Companion, which has published a series of six pamphlets, describing clearly and graphically the process by which a President is elected.

These pamphlets, prepared for use as a textbook for women's study groups, are the basis for many a course of studies which will prepare women for election day in a manner which will make their voting intelligent and patriotic.

No service which a civic organization can do for its members is more important than this one, declares the head of the Federated Women's clubs. And representatives of both political parties, who have examined the outlined courses of study, have emphasized that the woman's vote will undoubtedly be a highly important factor in the presidential results this year. The fact remains that political education of women may be highly effective in remedying the evils of the stay-at home vote. In the entire United States, this absentee evil is invariably large enough to change the result of an election. In 1920, and again in 1924, only half the eligible voters actually cast ballots. William H. Hill, former Congressman from New York State, estimates that the number of eligible voters in 1924 was 58,000,000, whereas the number who actually voted was only 29,000,000.

Women who desire to start courses of study in presidential politics may arrange to obtain copies of the textbooks by writing direct to the good citizenship bureau, room 100, 250 Park Avenue, New York.

Charging Carelessness To Others

W. E. Pool, an employee of the Norfolk-Southern freight department, at Raleigh, is bringing suit for $50,000 against the railroad for alleged damage to one of his feet, when another employee of the road stepped on his foot some time ago. Pool claims that the railroad company was negligent for not preventing one employee from stepping on the foot of another while working in the station together.

This suit is interesting for several reasons. The amount asked for looks heavy for just stepping on one foot. Just why he did not move his foot to keep the other fellow from stepping on it puzzles us, because holding so important a member of the body as a foot and letting another man step on it fifty thousand dollars' worth is something we do not understand.

Too many people try to make others pay for their own carelessness these days.

Intolerance

Why will men multiply their differences in important matters has long been a mystery. Yet they will. It is so on questions of vital importance, and especially is this true in political and religious issues. It is a sad thing to see two neighbors, both proclaiming the one God and Father and expressing their love and belief in Him, and yet they will quarrel about the way to approach Him; one claiming one road, while the other proclaims another way, and they quarrel until the gates are shut on them.

Servants with different talents will naturally have different viewpoints on certain great questions. Then why should we be so weak that we are willing to destroy ourselves rather than meet our neighbors and friends on one common level. We are too prone to have our own way or die. Many times people seem to prefer their own way to death, rather than the other fellow's way to life.

Undue and unfair persistence destroys the happiness of homes, the usefulness for political parties and the spirituality in religion.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my beloved sister, Mary Elizabeth Hardison, who departed this life May 29th, 1924, aged 40 years.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

God, in His wisdom, has recalled
The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
Her soul is safe in heaven.

Day by day we watched her
Fade and slowly sink away,
Though in our hearts we pray
That she might longer stay.

There was an angel band in heaven
That was not quite complete,
And God took you, darling sister,
To fill the vacant seat.

Her sister,
Mrs. JENNIE HOLLIDAY.
