The Thanksgiving Season

Thanksgiving is a Christian service. Yet it is not a season for long faces, but rather a season for smiles and joy and gladness. Our country now has "manna" for a whole year. If that is not a good reason to be thankful and joyous, then what will it take to make us physically happy?

The best thing to make happy those with more than they can use will be to give of their abundance to those not so fortunate. We are just so fixed by nature that the things we get do not make us as happy as the things we give. Remember the orphan.

Martin County Needs More Cows

Examination of Martin County children finds many under weight. In one school, with 27 families represented, there were only three families that had a cow, or only one-ninth of the children who drank milk. It so happened that every child in this school drank coffee. These same families have more than 200 hogs for slaughter, which is all right; but this community would be much better off without coffee for the children and less pork and with plenty of milk.

If Martin County is to have both health and wealth it must have more milk cows.

We are already producing plenty of tobacco, cotton, and peanuts, and doing plenty of work. What we need to do is produce just a little less of our money crops and put that much of our time and labor in milking cows and making butter. The cow should produce one-third of the family food, and of better quality and better suited for health than any food that can be bought in any store in America.

It would be interesting to know how many children develop diseased bodies and weak minds for the want of milk.

Invest Your Money At Home

Stock trading seems to be the only investment that is being made today. It is becoming the fad of the day to buy stock, some times very good, and some times very bad.

It is said that drug-store clerk, laborers, as well as nearly everybody else, are becoming to be strong on the stock markets. The people are leaving off buying building and loan stock and are buying instead General Motors, U. S. Steel, or some western gold or oil stock. Of course, it is sometimes a very quick way to make money, but it is often just as quick a way to lose money.

The history of the stock speculator shows at least one loser for every one that gains. No man can tell how rich he is when his wealth consists of nothing except margins in stocks, nor can he tell how soon he will be poor when he has no other asset.

When we remember that most of the valuable business concerns are dominated by a few wise men, we may assure ourselves that they are not going to let loose their hold on their business.

It is a very easy thing for a great industrial corporation to issue a boosting statement, shoot the prices up, sell their own stock at a great profit, and later on issue a bearish bulletin and shoot the price of the stock down, buy it back at a big reduction and pocket the difference.

If local money would seek local investment, business would be better at home.

A Job for the Legislature

It is about time for the folks to begin to tell the next legislature what to do; and, of course, the folks always want lots done. They generally want costs lowered and profits increased. Of course, there is nothing wrong about that. Yet in case they are unable to do that, there is just one little thing they may be able to do. That is to keep about two or two and a half people from being killed on our highways every day. We are not particular as to how they do it. It will be all right with us if they require every driver to give bond for all the damage he does, except to himself. It will be all right if they put every man that drives while drunk, half drunk, or quarter drunk, on the roads from ten to twenty years. They may penalize the fast driver to the limit. Anything will be satisfactory just so they make the roads safer for travelers of all kinds. If the legislature can only do one thing, let it be make some kind of a traffic law that will make travel safer.
