An Editor Retires

Forty-four years on the watch tower of the city of Goldsboro stood Colonel Joseph E. Robinson, to spread news of good will and warnings of danger to the people of Goldsboro and the people in the territory. His one great desire has been to better the condition of his neighbors, to strengthen them religiously, morally, mentally, physically and financially. Colonel Robinson retired as editor of the Goldsboro Daily Argus on April the thirtieth, selling the paper after running it for 44 years, reaching the age where the burden was too heavy to bear.

There are, of course, many richer people in Goldsboro than Colonel Robinson, for newspaper people rarely get rich; but suppose the people should be called upon to present the citizen who has rendered the greatest service to the city, there is little doubt but that Colonel Robinson would be the man. He has given every worthy cause the backing of his newspaper, the churches, the schools, the civic clubs, the city and county governments, all have found favor in his publicity, and practically every worth-while thing in the city is indebted to his service, to some degree, for its success.

Yet the service rendered by the newspaper is too often overlooked and especially by the more frivolous and less-thinking class. They fail to understand that the city grows as much from the newspaper as the newspaper does from the city.

Free Press Endangered

How long will it be before the world is afraid to speak? It really seems that the feeling of perfect freedom is rapidly passing.

Recent investigations of certain paper, power, and newspaper systems indicate that there is a growing effort to throttle the newspapers. The plan appears to be for the power trusts to form paper manufacturing trusts and they, in turn, to own the newspapers of the country. Of course, they claim it is only a business venture, but even at that it is a very dangerous venture for those who believe in fair play for all people. Naturally, a newspaper owned by a certain interest will speak more freely and more favorably about the things favorable to them than the things unfavorable to them. And, then, too, most of us want all the nice things we do published in big letters, and all the bad things we do hidden in the bottom of the waste basket.

Another thing, some advertisers demand of the newspaper to bow down and praise them when they give a few inches of advertising.

What we need is more people and more newspapers to find the truth and tell it untarnished to the world, so that more people may know the truth about things—social, political, and otherwise.

This is a day when many politicians do not want too much publicity; and there are lots of old reproaches parading around in social circles that would not let their wives and husbands know of their activities for any sum.

So the demand to soft-pedal on some news is very great. The servant is afraid to speak of the evil deeds of his lord, the debtor trembles in the presence of his creditors, the hireling dares not tell of the oppressions by his employer. Indeed, we are losing rather than gaining freedom of all kinds—with the exception of social freedom, which seems to be widening day by day.

More for the Tax Money

James F. Walsh, president of the Association for retrenchment in public expenditures, says the only real tax reform is "Spend less."

If we do not curb some of our public expenditures, we are in danger of collapsing. The greatest increase in our governmental cost is found in our schools. We should not cut the expenditure. But we certainly need to increase the efficiency of our schools, which have failed to keep pace with the rapidly growing cost.

Our taxpayers should demand better and more stringent government in our schools. We have too much waste of time, at heavy cost to those who indulge in all the time-wasting side lines.

It really appears that play, not work, is one of the school goals of the day, and the parents are more responsible for this condition than the teachers. One thing is certain about the situation: The country must turn over a new leaf.

Law and Order

Some of our North Carolina politicians, such as Senators, governors, etc., must be in a considerable strain trying to run down and find out the guilty parties who have harassed and beaten up people in Gastonia and destroyed their property. It seems that they have been quite successful down there in finding factory workers when they march around the streets a little bit, but they have failed to see folks who knock down and drag out strikers.

Forest Wardens Needed

Should the county employ forest-fire wardens would seem to be too plain a question to argue.

Fire is the greatest enemy of the wood. It kills even, to the stateliest pine. It destroys timber in an everything in its wake, from the sprouting acorn, hour which nature has used a century to build. It destroys animal life and actually burns out much of the value of soil.

Most of the fires come from carelessness and indifference. What we need is a better conscience on the woods-burning subject.

A few forest wardens scattered here and there to fight fires and to teach and impress the neighbors of the importance of keeping fire out of dry woods will go a long way towards saving the thousands in fire damage done each year by people who either don't know or don't care.

Many land owners do not know that they have no right to put fire in their own woods without giving all neighbors ample notice.

Martin County is being asked by the State to offer such sums as may be needed, up to $700. Wardens are paid only by the hour for services actually rendered, and when they summon men to fight forest fires they are also paid by the hour for their services. If no work is done, there will be no cost, and under the proposed plan, it can not cost this county more than $700.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

which gets the dirt from middle of the row and makes a perfect ridge without cutting off your feed roots. It has proved that hilling tobacco in this way has made a gain from $25 to $50 per acre.

For you know: When you side your tobacco the last times the feed roots are cut off, which checks the growth for a few days. During this time new feed roots are formed, which really causes a second growth. This second growth causes your tobacco to grow bony and thin. If the feed roots are not cut off, your tobacco will thicken as it spreads and make a better quality of tobacco.

Mr. Hyman Warren, Agent, Robersonville, N. C.

Dear sir:

I have used the Improved Fowler Cultivator about twelve years for laying-by tobacco, cotton, corn, and other crops. Also for hilling up sweet potatoes. I consider it one of the most useful and satisfactory cultivators I have ever used and would not be without it for many times the price.

Yours very truly,
J. E. WINSLOW.
