eration, to frankly and truthfully admit that we have mortgaged the farms our fathers cleared and that we are now facing semi-starvation. We know not who is going to feed us next week.

It is high time we Americans stopped bragging, and humble ourselves, use more horse sense and do more real work.

Railroad and Oil Folks Clash

There is now a big clash between the railroads and the oil folks. The railroads have been directing a campaign for months in an effort to create sympathy. The people have been taught that the carriers are paying all the tax while oil vehicles are getting all the business and paying little tax. Recently the Petroleum Institute said that the motor vehicles pay more than three times as much tax as all the railroads pay. The institute gives the following figures:

Railroads paid in taxes in 1930, $356,000,000
 Vehicles paid in taxes in 1930, $1,010,000,000

It is easy to understand why the railroads are uneasy about their own welfare because they see their future existence imperiled by the motor. The railroads complain that the bus is using the property of the states in competition with them. However, if we come down to the truth of the matter, the only difference in the railroad and the highway is that the people built the railroads and the corporations own them, while the motor built the highways and the states own them. So far our own State highways have not cost the property owners one cent for either construction or operation with one or two exceptions.

With the Rockfellers pulling for the motor and the Morgans pulling for the rails it is reasonable to believe that the fight is not near over.

Democracy In Congress

Congress may have accomplished but very little during the short session closing tomorrow; yet, the slant we got on our national legislators during the period raises our respect and increases our confidence in them.

For many years, law-makers have found it easy to forget their constituents when enacting laws. And it was no hard task for them to explain their actions to the satisfaction of the folks back home. Now conditions are different. When the hungry appear before them and make complaint, the law-makers can't point their finger at them and say presto; thou aren't hungry. Their cries are with them in their sleep.

Our folly is now realized, and even national legislators see that unless we get back to that point where men have a more equal chance in life our nation will die from the poison of its own corruption.

It can be truthfully said that there have been more signs of honest Democracy in Congress during the past few months than there has been at any other time in years.

Make Public Expenditures Public

The State, every county and town therein should publish a monthly statement of every public dollar spent, to whom it was paid and for what purpose.

It would cost something, but it is believed that more than a hundred times the cost would be saved. A public presentation of all public expenditures should be required by law.

Wherein The Big Interests Failed

The Big Interests have partially failed in their attempt to play the friends of the schools against the friends of the roads. There is no doubt about their attempting to scatter the forces pledged to lower property taxes, for at one time it looked as if they had succeeded in getting the road people dissatisfied with the action of the school folks. It was purely a quarreling cat game in which the foxy fellows hoped to get in and eat the cheese.

It now looks as if honor will outlast money in this Legislature.

Roads Are Essential

Roads are essential to successful farming. The city lives from the roads because it is only a center of exchange. Then why not let the State care for the little road as well as the big one?

It is, of course, just and proper to build roads suitable to the needs of traffic, but every community should have its outlet to the lines of through traffic. Let the State build them.
