PROVIDE READY FARM MARKETS

Farmer Finds It Hard To Turn from Tobacco for Market Is Limited

Everyone, no matter what his occupation may be, seems interested in the welfare of the farm population. In talking with a prominent attorney recently—a man of wide experience and large ability—the writer was impressed with his viewpoint that ready markets should be furnished for all products of the farm, especially for products for which no easily available market machinery has been set up.

We have markets in many places for cotton, tobacco, peanuts, hogs, poultry, milk, cream etc., and there are associations handling vegetables for members; but numbers of farmers especially those who are trying to break away from all cotton are at a loss to know what to do when they find themselves with a surplus of corn, hay, cowpeas, soybeans, velvet beans, and some other things.

In such cases, if arrangements can be made, it is far more profitable to feed these products to livestock on the producers farm than to sell; but this, we realize, cannot always be done; and it is in such case that agricultural progress receives a set back, by reason of the disappointment of the farmer with something to sell and no market in sight.

In North Carolina there is an Act under which farmers mutual exchanges have been organized in some counties to aid members in disposing of their produce, and for other constructive purposes.

The State of Virginia has also passed a cooperative marketing law to encourage the cooperative marketing of farm products in Virginia.

In spite of the laws passed and in spite of the immense amount of encouragement, effort and energy exerted and expended in trying to induce farmers to cooperate in forming Mutual Exchanges and associations for the improvement of their business affairs and for marketing purposes, there are literally thousands of farmers who have marketing problems that are irritating, discouraging and often times seemingly insurmountable.

To relieve this deplorable condition it looks as though the business men of the towns and cities of this great agricultural empire will have to come to the rescue of the unorganized farmers and set up establishments that will furnish a market for practically all commodities offered for sale and in whatever condition, if the goods can be put into merchandise shape for sale.

There are merchants who could provide the suggested service and operate it economically as a side-line; at least that is the thought that has occurred to us somewhat frequently during recent months.

The cities and towns need to give thought to the farmers marketing problems, for their prosperity (the prosperity of all classes is closely allied with the financial welfare of the rural population.

It is not possible that many towns and cities can really lift themselves by their bootstraps and hasten the return of urban prosperity by putting the rural population in touch with a ready, fair cash-market for farm produce that does not meet with a quick sale when and in the condition it comes from the farm seeking a market at a living price and profit.

COMPLETED ALL CRIMINAL CASES LAST TUESDAY

pany against Gaskill-Mace company was compromised, the defendant paying the cost.

Compromised out of court, the case of J. S. Ayers and company against Mrs. Addie Gurganus was ordered off the docket, the plaintiff paying the costs. A similar action resulted in the case of J. Rogers and Bro. against the defendant.

The case of Farmers and Merchants Bank against R. G. Harrison was settled and the case ordered off the docket, the defendant paying the costs.

In the case of D. D. Stalls against Farmers and Merchants Bank, John D. Biggs and H. G. Horton, trustee, it appeared that H. G. Horton, trustee, had filed his final account and that it had been approved; the court then ordering the case off the docket.

The case of J. T. and W. S. Barnhill against Jas. A. Warren was settled out of court, the defendant paying the cost.

A similar case and a similar result were recorded in the action of J. Henry Keel and other against R. L. Cohn, receiver and National Surety company. The judgment giving the plaintiff $2,624.15 was re-affirmed and the surety company was ordered to pay the amount, that it will be entitled to any dividend paid by the defunct institution.

The case of O. G. Carson against H. O. James et al was settled out of court, the defendant paying the costs.

Differences in the case of D. G. Matthews against B. D. Critcher were arranged out of court, the defendant paying the costs.

The case of Timothy Reeves against Walter Harrison was compromised and removed from the docket.

The court is now working on a slow case, one that promises to be lengthy and baffling. Dill, Cranmer, Truitt corporation is claiming a tract of land in Goose Nest under Dick Gatlin, and D. W. Downs, defendant, claims the land under a deed from McCullough.

Mascot Magnesium (Dolomitic) Limestone Is Rich in Calcium and Magnesium Carbonates. Both Are Essential Plant Foods Required by All Crops

MANY USERS OF "MASCOT" HAVE SOLD THEIR LAST TOBACCO CROP FOR MORE THAN $200 PER ACRE — SOME FOR $300 PER ACRE

What Mr. A. J. Conner, Editor, Rich Square, N. C., said:

"I have used your Limestone on my own farms and know it to be good."

What W. E. Allen, Wenona, N. C., says:

"I have been getting 15 to 20 bushels of beans per acre. This year (1930) I used Mascot Lime broadcast one ton per acre and got 30 bushels per acre of fine beans. The extra beans more than paid for the Lime."

J. R. Stewart, Craven County, N. C., says:

"I used about 500 lbs. "Mascot" per acre to my corn and found good results, and also about 500 lbs. per acre on peanuts and got about 50 per cent more peanuts."

F. W. Whitehurst, Roue 1, New Bern, N. C., 1930:

"Limed 50 acres of corn with "MASCOT" and had to build another crib to house the corn." This was on black swamp land.

The UNIFORM fineness of "MASCOT" makes light applications effective and in soil moisture insures quick availability.

CAN BE and IS profitably used in the fertilizer mix - drilled. If not pre-mixed, can be mixed in the drill when the fertilizer is used.

When your fertilizer mix contains Calcium and Magnesium Carbonate as furnished in Mascot Limestone, you have a more "complete" fertilizer for cotton, corn, grain, grass, legumes, tobacco and truck crops.

For uniform fineness specify "MASCOT" and if "MASCOT" is not available locally — write us.
