Remember Your Mother

Remember Mother, whether living or dead. Remember her with all of your loyalty and love; honor her with all your might and main, with all your sympathy and affection.

Love her with that tenderness and thoughtfulness that will cause you not to offend or grieve her, nor cause her sorrow on account of any deed or act, whether deliberate or thoughtless, that will cause her pain, grief, or anxiety.

Remember, she is interested in your life and character and every violation of the laws of God or man causes her trouble.

Honor thy mother.

Senator Lawrence's Newest Excuse

Senator Lloyd Lawrence, of Hertford County, has flopped again. This time he hatched up a mammoth, gigantic excuse—fearing, he said, that a luxury tax would affect peanut candy.

Of course, the senator is not given credit for this big idea, nor did it come from the peanut farmers of his district. He knows it would not cost the peanut farmers of the State four cents each in luxury tax.

The fact is, Mr. Lawrence seems quite willing to see his neighbors' farms sold for taxes.

The trouble with Lawrence is that he manages to absorb the same ideas that the big tax-dodgers possess. We don't know why, and even his own folks don't understand him.

Governor Gardner's Dilemma

Governor Gardner confirmed half the people of North Carolina as prophets by his speech Tuesday night. They had said all along that he was trying to shelter wealth.

It is a late day in a long session for the Governor to come out and try to protect wealth, when he has lacked courage and boldness to suggest it sooner.

The legislature should now refuse to give his statements and appeals any more credence than it gives to any other of our citizens.

It might be proper, however, for the assembly to pass resolutions of sympathy for the governor, because he is in a big dilemma. It is a devil of a job to stand with men and money both, and the straddle is straining him.

Should Be Confined, Not Banished

The Kinston judge who banished 20 women from that city last week because of their depravity of morals did a meaner thing than the man who sowed tares in his neighbor's wheat.

These women are to go out into the highways of the world to spread disease, death and destruction to others, who might be spared if Kinston would take care of her own. To send out twenty harlots is worse than sending insane men into a powder house with frebrands.

There was a time when bad men and women were banished to lonely islands and desolate jungles, where they were subjected to the ravages of wild beasts and the pangs of starvation. But in these latter days of progressiveness, we have provided homes and prisons for our depraved criminals, and no court should have the right to banish the immoral diseased scum of the earth on other people.

Conformist Religion Will Not Stand

Dr. Matthews, of the University of Chicago, said in a sermon in Chapel Hill Sunday that 'Religion must adapt itself to the changing order.'

Statements of this kind are puzzling to th coverage mind, and though they come from the "high-ups," in the high places, such as the University of Chicago, there is much room for doubting the truth of the assertion.

We, of course, know that there has not been a day since the delivery of the Sermon on the Mount that man has been fully satisfied with religion, and men are constantly trying to change it.

The question is should religion be changed to fit the new order of things, or should things be kept in the line that religion teaches.

We are always complaining at the order of government, the financial field, the moral status, the laxity of the home. Suppose our government had been run on principles taught by religion, and our homes and social relations had conformed to religious principles. There is no doubt but that conditions would have been better.

The thing needful is that business conform to religion; then both our people and our country will be happier and better. Religion is not supposed to change to suit men.

It should be remembered that the proudest of men have failed in their efforts to establish a religion of their own liking.

A Game for Fools

The news that France is going to enlarge her navy is no doubt good news for the Dupont Powder Company, the Bethlehem Steel Company, and the ship-builders. It means big sales and big profits for them, because it means that eventually America will have to build, too.

There are millions of people in our country, though, who regret that big navies are to be built. The mothers who are carrying their babies in their arms know they are nurturing them for no other destiny than to be shot, crippled, and killed in some foolish war that is brought on by greed.

War psychology has always been too powerful for the ordinary human being, who yields when appealed to for his bravery, and then he can be transformed into a creature of vengeance. And then the old stories of brutalities to women and children, they excite us, too.

Yet when we coldly face the facts of history, we are bound to admit that most wars are nothing but games played by fools.

Wealth vs. Humanity

The little man has cause to sorrow. His opportunities are gone. He has no job unless he bows down to a big man and prays for it. He has no opportunity, for development, because every branch of industry and science is dominated by the trust organizations.

Electricity, manufacturing, motorization, chemical science, transportation, merchandising, all are now well under monopolistic domination, and no young man has a chance any more. If he enters any of the great fields of endeavor, he must sell his hand and his head, and even his soul, to the masters who hire him, because now all inventions in such fields are the property of the employer and not of the inventor while in their employ.

Wealth has crushed humanity. The wealthy few claim the right to establish the living standards of the many, to the point of saying how many hours they shall work, how much they shall receive, what recreations they shall enjoy, the kind of clothing they shall wear, the kind of homes and schools, and so on.

While the great masses claim to be free and independent, they are mistaken. They can not even own a legislature nor a congress. They must belong to and be the property of the wealthy.

The great masses of humanity have been ignorant a long time in thinking they had representation in our law-making bodies.

What we most need is a wiser electorate. Watch the politicians in the future. Do not trust them unless they are tied and muzzled.

More Jobs—Not Higher Wages

Is Mellon ripening up? A recent announcement was made that Secretary Andrew Mellon is advocating maintenance of a high wage scale.

Mr. Mellon has been charged as an enemy to the working man. It now seems he has had a change of heart and wants the laborer to enjoy some of the fruits of his work.

The main trouble with the wage earner today is no job, which is worse than a wage cut.

The only apparent relief for the laborer is shorter hours for those who have jobs in order that more jobs may be created, which would spread out the income to all people, and save the idle workers from hunger and cold.

Neither the raising nor lowering of wages will cure the dilemma, when half the people work at a good wage scale and the other half have no work. It is much worse than if all worked for half wages.

What Mr. Mellon should advocate is holding up wages and opening up jobs.

Fair Tax Law All That Is Asked

The famous correspondent, J. C. Baskerville, who is hashing the legislative news for a number of North Carolina newspapers, seems to lean heavily toward the big folks, and speaks very sarcastically of the MacLean Law advocates, declaring they only have a majority of one in the house, which, it will be remembered from the record vote on the bill, is far from the truth.

Baskerville is evidently in close touch with the gang of tax-dodgers who have always written the tax laws from time immemorial, and now are making their hardest fight, because it is the first time in half a century that the land owners, who have had to bear the burden of government for these many years, have actually been in the fight. Baskerville is evidently worried and disgusted at the cries and appeals of the poor, who are losing their homes in great numbers.

He deprecates the prospect of an adjournment without a tax bill.

Well, suppose the assembly does adjourn without making any provision to raise taxes to pay the governor and state officers, and the judges, etc. That will put them in a strain, too.

Certainly we need a tax law, and a fair one, but Baskerville ought to know that if some folks would pay as much on a fair tax as they do in trying to avoid paying a fair tax, it would largely solve the problem.

ANCIENT FAIRY STORY COMES TRUE FOR HOMELESS BABE AS RESULT OF NEWSPAPER STORY

Young Couple of Wealth and Refinement Adopt Little Bobby, For Whom Salvation Army Officials Had Been Seeking a Home

The following story appeared in this week's issue of The Roanoke, Beacon, published at Plymouth:

From pinching poverty and without even a home to a home of wealth and culture and all the comforts that go to make life easy and pleasant is the story of little Bobby, the infant babe, whom Mrs. Brewer, of the local post of the Salvation Army has been seeking a home during the past several weeks. Bobby's case sounds almost like an ancient fairy story.

In the first place, it was not Bobby's fortune to be born with a silver spoon in his mouth. And here recently he was even without a home. The future did not loom so bright for him. However, Mrs. Brewer of the Salvation Army got busy and announced through the Roanoke Beacon that she was seeking a home for Bobby.

And as the fates would have it, a wealthy young couple of culture and social background from a distant state, saw the news item in the Beacon concerning Bobby's plight. Accordingly, they drove down here in an expensive type of automobile and with ample credentials, made arrangements for adopting Bobby as their own son.

It is understood that Bobby's new parents plan to give him every advantage including the best education that the country affords. And some day, he will doubtless receive a handsome legacy in addition to other things.

Mrs. Brewer states that there were many interested parties, but that the couple from the distant state were selected because of their Christian characters and position to provide for the baby.

CLUB MEMBERS TO GO TO CAMP

Two Boys and Two Girls Selected to Represent North Carolina

Two girls and two boys have been selected by agricultural extension workers at State College to represent the 20,000 or more 4-H club members at the National 4-H club camp to be held at Washington from June 17 to 23.

The club members selected are Louise Elliott, of Stanly County, Olive Jackson, of Pitt County, Boyce Brooks, of Duplin, and Ralph Suggs, of Gaston.

"These boys and girls not only have the endorsement of their county farm and home agents, but their interest in club work and their outstanding qualities of leadership have attracted statewide attention," says I. O. Schaub, director of agricultural extension at State College.

The record of Boyce Brooks shows that during his three years' work as a club member he has grown all the vegetables for a family of seven for a money value of $945. During that time he has also been president of his local club, president of his county federation, vice president of the State Federation, and last year was elected president of the State Federation of 4-H clubs.

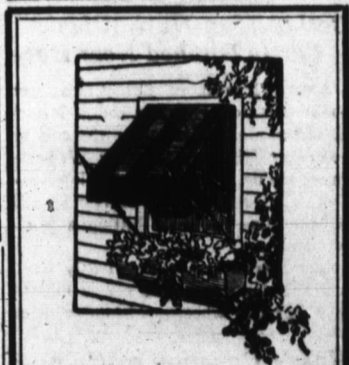

Louise Elliott has been a club member for seven years and has held office of secretary in the local club, the county council, and in the State Federation, as well as completing projects in foods, clothing and room improvement.

Projects in corn, dairy calf, poultry and forestry have been completed by Ralph Suggs, of Gaston, and his consolidated report shows a profit of $487.96 for his nine years' service. He has held office as secretary and president of his local club and has served as historian for the State Federation. In 1929 Ralph won second place in the State Health Contest.

Olive Jackson is a member of the Winterville club in Pitt County and has shown outstanding qualities as a leader in clothing work and in her work with the local club. She has been an active member for six years with completed projects in food, clothing, and room improvement.

77 Club Members Study Work at Branch Station

Seventy-seven 4-H club members journeyed with the club agent of Wayne County to the Coastal Plain Branch Station near Willard to study the research work being conducted there.

Mrs. Redfearn secures large orders from hotels, colleges, cafeterias, and assigns these to certain producers who cooperate to fill the orders.

Since 1923, when the Rocky Mount curb market was organized by Mrs. Effie Vines Gordon, home agent of Nash County, sales have totaled $190,693.49. There are some 510 persons who sell on this market with 115 who come nearly every market day.

Mrs. McKimmon says the other curb markets have not done such a large volume of business, since some of them have been established only recently. However, each of the markets is offering a profitable outlet for surplus produce which formerly had to be peddled, often at a loss, if sold at all.

Bulletin Gives Methods For Destroying Termites

Small, blackish, white-winged "ants" that fly in your house in spring or fall may be termites and may be destroying the woodwork of your home. Leaflet 31-L and Farmers' Bulletin 1472-F, which may be obtained from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., tell how to build a house to keep these pests out and how to get them out and keep them out if they are already in.

Twenty farmers in Catawba County will make a business of their farming operations this year. Accurate records of cost and production will be kept and a check made of the work when the crops are harvested.
