A Misleading Statement

The National Fertilizer Association, in its efforts to choke Muscle Shoals, makes the statement that private producers have cut the price of complete fertilizers 68 per cent below the 1919 price, which means that a farmer can buy the same fertilizer for $32 now that cost him $100 in 1919.

We would like to know the name of one farmer who is buying for less than one-third of what he paid in 1919, and we would like to know just one fertilizer company which is selling as much fertilizer for $32 now as it sold for $100 in 1919.

If there is anybody that wants Muscle Shoals dam washed down stream and destroyed, it is the fertilizer and power folks. They seem to be afraid the government will go to making fertilizer and selling power, and that the people will find out from that source the actual cost of making nitrogen and generating power.

The National Fertilizer Association ought to be made to prove its statement.

What of the Future?

The question of our present condition is not of so much importance to us as what of future years? Most of the people are getting along some way, although not quite like they may wish. We are able to stand it. But what of tomorrow? Are our children going to be able to feed and clothe themselves? There was a time when young folks were taught to work. They are today the business leaders of the country. In that day when young men went to college they were permitted a short Christmas holiday. Now they get a week or two at Thanksgiving, then the same at Christmas, a few days at quarter-term examinations, and a long time for Easter, besides all the time for sporting they want.

Of course, this is not the business of many folks. It only means more weaklings to go out on life's battle line tomorrow.

Everybody is in training to handle high-powered machinery, with the purpose of not having to work hard like daddy and mama. This alone will ruin the country. The day that the machine does the work man will be done with, and will have to go, unless he owns the machine, and only a few can own them.

We are already a long way over-mechanized. The man who makes the machine has found it easy to sell the folks, until now the folks can not buy the machine any longer, and the machine age has gone broke.

Unless we hark back to work, folks are going to find making a living harder in the future than in the past. Something should be done to save us from this machine and play age.

Speaking of Economy

If the Senators and Representatives in Washington are so anxious to effect economy, why don't they go about cutting their own salaries? Like many another citizen, in the early stages of the depression I was against cutting salaries and wages. We all hoped for a "turn" and many of us thought that pay cuts would tend to make bad times worse. But a different situation exists today. Cuts have been put into effect in commerce and industry, in education, in state and county and town governments. Of course there are many classes of government employees who are still getting less than they deserve and whose pay should not be reduced. Army and Navy officers, for example, and thousands of clerks. But Senators and Representatives get $10,000 a year. Furthermore, they receive extra allowances with which a great many of them employ members of their own families. The economic situation being what it is, they are drawing too much from the public treasury.—Louis Graves in The Chapel Hill Weekly.

A Matter of Bleeding

Greensboro Daily News.

Dr. H. T. Hunter, president of Cullowhee State Normal College, has discovered the reason for the state's inability to "meet proper educational expenses." The trouble is, Dr. Hunter told an Asheville audience, that the Federal Government is bleeding the state of North Carolina in the collection of approximately $300,000,000 in internal revenue annually.

To the educator's declaration there can be no denial, but the federal government may be quite ready to do some accusing of its own. What about the manner in which the states are bleeding the Federal government? There has been an increasing demand for Federal aid in various activities and North Carolina has never been found very far to the rear in its presentation of claims. North Carolina farmers made no effort to defeat the $500,000,000 farm board appropriation. North Carolina service men have joined quite enthusiastically, a goodly number of them at least, in the bonus agitation. The war department at State College and Davidson. Federal aid highway projects in increasingly large numbers are even now the hope of state leaders.

When the reconstruction finance measure was under consideration, North Carolinians urged its prompt passage as vigorously as anybody else. A district office of the newly created corporation has been secured for Charlotte, and Tar Heel institutions in need of assistance are preparing to obtain relief for themselves and the citizenry which they serve from the enormous pool at hand. All these projects are commendable, many of them necessary. But the point is that North Carolina and other states, for states are but citizens in the aggregate, have sought this federal assistance, have dumped more and more of their woes upon Washington and looked to the Federal government as never before for relief. Each may, with a certain amount of justice, be accused of bleeding the other, and in the conflicting accusations hope of easement becomes more remote than ever.

Back of the argument over who's bleeding whom must be the transcending realization that whenever the taxpayer gets anything from the government, state or federal, he'll eventually be called upon to pay for it in terms of his own blood.
