The Wrong Direction

Can there be any wisdom in the policy of hiring men to go into the forests as an army of woodworkers for the primary purpose of giving them jobs, and at the same time cut out agricultural workers who are on experiment farm stations and teaching the vocational science of home economics and farm work? It can be nothing more than a move in the wrong direction. Certainly the forests are important. But the people are fed from the fields and not from the forests. So it would appear to us that it will be better to stick to the side that feeds us and produces our wealth.

What About Beer?

What about beer? Who is going to drink it? Will it be the wise or will be the foolish; will it be the rich or will it be the poor; will it be the strong, or will it be the weak; will be the gentle, or will it be the rough? Which side will you take—the safe side of letting it alone altogether, or will you try a thing that millions have tried before and, after traveling all the way, have admitted that it has not helped their health nor increased their wealth.

We hear some people say they want to taste of beer just to say they have tasted it. We hear some say they are not going to taste it so they can meet the judgment if it comes at any moment and be able to say they have not injured themselves in any way by drinking beer, nor have they an example to induce others to drink.

If there has ever been a day when people should be taught the dangers of alcohol, this is the day. Every teacher and every pupil should be careful to keep away from beer. Every preacher and every churchman should teach by word and example the danger that lies in the path of every man who drinks alcohol of any kind—not that every man is hurt, but many are ruined, and we can not tell who it will be when we begin to drink, because it will sometimes rob the best of men of everything worth while—can't hold what he has, can't hold down a job, and finally he passes out of life's picture.

Every father and mother should abstain and teach their children to do likewise. In fact, every person of every age, every color, and of every kind ought to teach and practice total abstinence. No man will be the worse for failure to drink beer or liquor of any kind.

We regret to hear and see so many people who take drinking as a joke and jest it through as if it was of little importance and not dangerous.

Drinking liquor or beer is a slow way to pay taxes; it has no possibilities of building up honor and wealth for the drinker. It is only the man who makes and sell it who gets the wealth.

Must your best thought, based on your own interests and the good of your country, and silently and reverently pledge yourself never to defile your lips with beer.

Currency Inflation

The thing most to the point the President has talked about for some time is the matter of currency inflation. If he will just put his foot on the neck of that gang of big bankers who have throttled down the flow of money through the channels of business and keep them from manipulation of our money affairs, then business will automatically begin to improve. Without more money or the cancellation of debts, there is no hope.

Would Do the Telephone Company A Favor

Bertie Ledger-Advance. We see where a civic club in Lumberton has petitioned the Corporation Commission to hurry up its promised investigation of telephone rates. The civic club says the rates are entirely too high and unjustified. We agree with them and join with them in urging the investigation, believing that it will reveal the complaint of too high rates justified and will be followed by an order for reductions. In this territory a reduction in rates would do the telephone company a favor since the high charges it has persisted in maintaining has caused many former users of their service to abandon it as too expensive a luxury.

Protecting the Banks

What is the proper way to inflate or expand the currency?

President Roosevelt has sifted out all the bad banks, so those now existing are absolutely solid, although they can not loan money under our present conditions, because nothing seem to have a stable value—and nothing has value because the banks can not make loans.

Now, let Mr. Roosevelt tell all the good banks to start loaning money to those who need it and have reasonable security. Then assure the loaning bank that the Government will take care of any runs that may be made on such banks, loaning them money from the new currency, now on hand on their good securities.

This process would put idle money in circulation, raise the price of labor, corn, cotton, wheat, and every other commodity that goes to market.

A part of our trouble is caused by money being held in banks, and without some kind of guarantee that no runs shall be made on them they are foolish to make loans—not knowing when a panicky feeling may produce a bank run.

Now that we all understand that there are plenty of good banks, and with the assurance that the United States is backing them, we would be safe in borrowing and loaning.

Everybody knows the government is loaning money by the millions on security not half as good as the average bank requires and would gladly put up for some of that promised new money.

Mr. Roosevelt, let the Government handle the money; loan it through the commercial banks of the country and keep it out of the hands of the New York Bankers Trust, which is robbing the life out of the country.

Take The Profit Out of War

Mr. R. R. Clark, commenting in the Greensboro Daily News, commends a newly proposed draft system for the United States that is worthy of our full consideration.

The plan provides, in case of war, for the Government to take over and use such man power as needed, and also take over all the powder and gun factories, all the factories which produce war equipment; then work all drafted men in whatever places they are found to be the best fitted. If a man is found unfit for the front lines, put him in the forest or in the factory, put him on a soldier's pay and soldier's rations; paying particular attention to excessive charges for machinery, patents, and the like.

If such a plan should prevail, then folks would not be so anxious for war. Nearly all the war talk comes from the fellow who wants to make money out of war; those who stand in front and are liable to be shot don't want war.

If our government has the right to draft one type of men to go to war, it certainly has the same right to draft all classes of men on the same basis of service to furnish them food and equipment to carry on war.

Take out the speculation, and we will be in less danger of war.

"I Have My Insurance"

Richmond News-Leader. Many a man who has tossed restlessly at night during the last two years has found comfort of mind and repose of nerves in the reflection, "I have my insurance."

Salaries may decline, employment may be lost, mortgage-payments may be beyond one's reach, but as long as the modest premiums on a man's insurance can be met, he knows that death will not leave his family penniless. Next to his religion itself, the home-loving American has cherished his insurance during the depression. Last year, when the future looked so black, the fathers and husbands of America purchased $16,400,000,000 of life insurance, and actually ended the year with more insurance in force than when the depression began. That shows what the average American thinks of the protection his insurance gives.

The mystery of how America has survived the hard times without starvation or revolution is explained by the one word, life-insurance. Men who would not have been able to meet their imperative obligations or, in some cases, even to feed their families in any other way, borrowed on their insurance and tided themselves over. Total payments of $2,600,000,000 in benefits of all kinds were paid American policy holders in 1931, or 28 times as much as was raised publicly for relief. What a different tale there would be to tell if the harried business man had not been able to say, "I have my life-insurance."

Storms may come and pass and come again. We may never witness in this generation as long a period of fair weather as industry enjoyed in 1926-29; but all of us know that whether the next wave of prosperity be long or short, a storm will gather again. The man who faces it without life-insurance is as foolish as he who sets out over deep water in an open boat and does not carry a life-preserver.

Criticism

Christian Life Missionary. A man, going down a street in Chicago, came to a taxidermist's shop and stopped long enough to criticize some of its ware. Scrutinizing an owl, he said, "That owl is not stuffed right; its head is not on right, the body is not poised right, the feathers are not fixed right; and if I could not stuff an owl better than that I would go out of the taxidermist business." Just then the owl moved. He had criticized a live owl. The Word of God lives. It is not offered for criticism, but is a guide to life and a comfort in death.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile - Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. *For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blisters. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "top and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.
